WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pay Board was reported today to have vetoed its first labor contract by rejecting by a 9-5 vote a 12 per cent raise for aerospace workers.

An informed source said the board did not roll back the raise to any specific figure. Rather, the source said, it simply turned down a motion by the five labor members to approve the raise.

The board recessed after the vote, leaving open the possibility that it might later set some standard to guide labor and management in renegotiating the matter.

The two unions involved, the AFL-CIO International Association of Machinists and the United Auto Workers, have scheduled a strategy session of more than 300 plant negotiators and union representatives for next Saturday in St. Louis. Legislative Goals

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes gave the 1972 Missouri legislature 17 jobs to do today and urged the members to concentrate on only the most important problems or face "a very difficult session" in this election year.

He proposed two emergency measures for quick action to conform with federal requirements and some sweeping welfare reforms. They included putting welfare payments on a "per cent of need" basis, eliminating present monthly maximum payments.

That is a new concept for Missouri.

The two emergency proposals should be adopted as quickly as possible, Hearnes told the lawmakers soon after they convened in the first regular election year session under a new annual session system.

He said the unemployment compensation law to meet federal requirements must be passed in the early days of the session to "protect worker's benefits and save employers from the burden of additional federal taxes."

If the bill is not passed quickly, employers would have to pay an estimated $140 million more in taxes and workers in high unemployment areas could not get 13 additional weeks of unemployment compensation.

The other emergency recommendation by Hearnes was for quick action on a billboard control law to meet federal requirements or face possible loss of up to $12 million a year in federal highway funds.

The governor noted the legislature has only four months to act and faces an unusually large number of bills because about 700 were carried over in the House from last spring and several hundred already have been pre-filed in both houses.

Looking at this problem, along with the state's fiscal condition, Hearnes called on his experience as governor and former legislator to advise:

"I think you have little choice but to concentrate on those items of greatest importance to our state.

"If you can avoid getting bogged down in this very heavy workload, and will set your sights instead on the major items of legislation deserving immediate attention, I believe you can have a very successful and productive session."

True to his pre-session promise, the governor recommended no tax increases and only two new programs — establishment of a state fire marshal's office to help combat arson and creation of a public defender system to provide legal counsel for indigents.

Both have failed in previous sessions.

Much of the governor's message was devoted to proposals for reforms in the welfare programs.

He said he had long advocated that the federal government should assume welfare costs but "it appears now that a federal takeover of welfare may be delayed for many years. In the meantime I think we can improve the present welfare programs in Missouri."

To settle the argument about "loafers" on the welfare rolls, Hearnes recommended money be

Release Terms U.S. Prisoners

HONG KONG (AP) — North Vietnam appeared today to harden its terms for the release of U.S. prisoners.

Hanoi said the United States must abandon its policy of Vietnamizing the war to obtain the prisoners' freedom.

An end to Vietnamization has always been implicit among Communist demands for a final solution in Vietnam. But this is the first time it has linked it with the prisoner issue.

Previously, the Communists at the Paris peace talks had linked a timetable for a U.S. forces withdrawal to the overthrow of President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam.

An end to Vietnamization, the process of training South Vietnamese forces so South Vietnam can defend itself, would, at this stage probably mean the fall of Thieu. President Nixon repeatedly has emphasized the importance of Vietnamization to his withdrawal plans.

City Clerk Geneva Pyle reported real estate tax collections of $22,379.46 and personal property tax collections of $5,291.21.

The fire department endorsed the purchase of a new fire truck to replace the 1953 model truck the city now has. The new truck would be slightly larger than the present one, and carry more fire fighting equipment.

Ray White, 115 Medler, requested the City Council to extend water, sewer, and gas lines to a new subdivision to be located in the southwest part of town.

The council voted to contact an engineer to obtain cost estimates and study means of financing the project

Alderman Jack Moore suggested that the city join the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission in organizing an early warning system for severe storms and tornadoes.

The council authorized the organization of an auxiliary police force for this purpose. Initially, five auxiliary policemen will be recruited in Bernie.

A year-end report from the police department showed 32 accidents, 245 traffic tickets, one break-in, and no robberies in the city during 1971.

The City Council passed a weed ordinance which gives the city the right to mow lots or yards which become overgrown. The property owner is then charged for the mowing.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Though the machinery of the human body is the most delicate in the world, people neglect it and howl if it doesn't run right.

It is good for men to close the door on the past, look confidently to the future, and set a course that leads to worthy accomplishment. This is the privilege of each of us as a new year opens before us.

We live and work by our calendars, but we should also rise above the daily and weekly routines of our lives, "adventuring" always with our time and our talents.

Though we measure our lives by the length of their years, it is more significant to grow in the depth and breadth of our living. This we can do — if we will it!

WILL JACKSON
ENGINEER A SCOOP?

Senator Henry M. Jackson, Democrat of Washington, has been known since childhood by the nickname of Scoop. It was given to him by an older sister, Gertrude, because her little brother reminded her of a character in a cartoon strip that bore the name Scoop — Cub Reporter.

The comic strip started its existence on the front page of THE EVERETT HERALD in Washington on March 12, 1912, two months before the Senator was born. His sister said she thought that he had the same initiative and inquisitive nature as Scoop, the Cub Reporter in the cartoon.

Henry M. Jackson has represented his State in Washington, D.C., for thirty years, 12 in the House of Representatives and 18 in the Senate. His initiative this year has emboldened him to plan to seek the Presidency of the United States.

It would be an enormous scoop if he could bring it off. Out in front of him in the Democratic race are Senator Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, and Senator Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts. Senator Jackson has given no hostages to the left or right, but he does have some powerful friends, including organized labor. He is very much his own man. Management also thinks highly of him.

He has a wife and two children. His wife, Helen, reminds people of Grace Kelly, Princess of Monaco. That should be no hindrance to his chances. Senator Jackston also understands the need for a strong national defense, and has no illusions about Communist intentions. That should not hurt him with the silent majority.

'IT'S WHAT WE KNOW THAT AIN'T SO...'

"Tain't what we don't know that hurts us so much," said 19th-century humorist Artemus Ward. "It's what we know that ain't so."

The words were never more apt than in this day when we toss around figures in the millions and billions, whether dollars, populations or distances to planets, as if we knew what we were talking about. And like Hitler's "big lie," the bigger the static we use, the more likely that people will believe it.

Tell someone that highways are paving over the country at the rate of one million acres a year, as the Sierra Club tells us, and he'll not dispute you. After all, it's obvious; we see it going on all around us. We "know" it's true.

The fact is: Most road building in the past half-century has been in improvements to existing roads, not building new ones.

In 1916, the United States had nearly 3 million miles of roads and streets. Today, while population has doubled and the number of motor vehicles has increased 30-fold, road mileage has increased less than one-fourth to a total of 3.7 million miles.

Even at the high rate of building since the Interstate system began in 1959 — 120 square miles a year — it would take 25,000 years to pave over the country.

Another often-heard example is the claim that 750,000 Americans have been killed by firearms since the turn of the century.

This wholly unsubstantiated statistic seems to have originated in the mind of the author of an antigun book, and a lot of well-meaning people have taken it from there.

The fact is: Nobody knows how many people have been killed by firearms since even as recently as 1960 because the FBI did not begin compiling data until 1961. Only very limited and incomplete figures exist for the years back to 1910, and they do not always distinguish between handguns and long guns, between deaths due to firearms and deaths due to explosives or between homicides and accidents.

Somewhat smaller, but still impressive, is the statistic of 700,000 children allegedly injured by toys every year. This oft-repeated charge originated in a staff report of the National Commission on Product Safety in June, 1970.

The fact is: The figure is a sheer "projection" — that is, a guesstimate — based on an assumption that toys cause 3.5 per cent of all household accidents.

But no one really knows the number of accidents connected with toys, both because no one has ever counted them and because it is not alwasy easy to attribute the cause of an accident.

If a child carrying a toy falls down a flight of steps and is injured by the toy, did the toy really cause the injury?

There definitely are dangerous toys, and government and responsible manufacturers are trying to eliminate them. But nothing is helped by throwing around alarming and meaningless figures.

A different kind of statistic is the one that is true enough as far as it goes, but some people go too far with it — for instance, the lamentable fact that the United States ranks something like 15th among industrial nations in infant mortality, behind such nations as Sweden, Norway, Finland and Switzerland.

Can the United States, with 200 million people, with its large minority groups, its big cities and vast farmlands, its slums, its Appalachia, its diverse climate, be compared with a country like Switzerland?

But it is, if a statistic is needed to prove a point or grind an ax.

No,'taint't what we know that hurts us so much. It's what we know that just ain't so.

One of our hard-nosed banker relatives is sending us an economic report which sometimes curls our hair. Here's a portion of the report that is "Advice To Businessmen":

"Those who are in executive capacities in business enterprises have perhaps the most difficult task of all. It is incumbent upon them to anticipate events furthest into the future. Unlike the investor who can quickly change course, businessmen must make seemingly almost irrevocable decisions on the basis of inadequate information. Planning for business cannot wait until all the signs are clear. Any businessman must immediately after New Year's take into consideration all of '72 and beyond. It is these people that we address ourselves with longer term advice.

"As we stated earlier, the precise form, degree, duration of the troubles is not clear. As stated many times, we do not anticipate a period of wild, run-away inflation prior to a sharp economic downturn and possible deflation. Therefore, our advice to businessmen for the coming year and beyond would be defensive:

"1. All of the moves you take and all of the plans should be designed not to lose control of your business. By that, we mean when you expand in any area you, of necessity, surrender some control over your destiny to the consumer, supplier, banker, etc. Limit your expansion to the degree wherein your destiny is still your own.

"2. Watch your receivables. Tighten your credit business standards. Do not be unduly disturbed if your competitor seemingly gets more business for a period of time. When the period of economic difficulties arrives, you will survive. He may not.

"3. Similarly, watch your own payables. Do not let your suppliers be able to put you out of business if and when they become desperate.

"4. It is not necessary, in our view, to build anticipatory inventories to a great degree. Our economic outlook is not that optimistic, but more important, when difficult times do arrive and money becomes more valuable than goods, then you will not have any problem fulfilling your inventory needs from over-extended suppliers.

"5. This is not the time, in our judgment, to engage in a heavy expansion program of plant and equipment. Nothing is more onerous than paying interest on the debt of under-utilized capacity. Watch your fixed debt. Try to reduce it as much as possible. Don't overdraw your welcome at the bank by being in a precarious position while you can help it. There may come a time when you cannot help it.

"In summary, don't let your emotions rule you. Watch your business. What is it really like? - not what everyone is telling you it should be like, but what is it really like? Even if the President of the United States tells you that we are enjoying a boom but you, in your own business, show only modest activity, trust your own figures and prepare and plan accordingly."

LET EVERYONE
KEEP HIS HEAD

Extremism in the name of ecology is not virtue. It could, in fact, result in an "eco-backlash."

This was the warning issued by William D. Ruckleshaus, administrator of the new federal Environmental Protection Agency, at the recent 66th annual convention of the National Audubon Society.

In the past, environmental reformers might be excused an occasional exaggeration as a way of getting the public to listen. "The great danger now," he says, "Is that by overplaying their hand, activists, will lost their credibility and many of our hard-won gains will be lost or vitiated."

An example of environmental extremism may be the current campaign against phosphates in detergents.

No one disputes the fact that, as nutrients, the chemicals contribute to the early aging of lakes by stimulating the excessive growth of algae. Scientists are not agreed, however, on whether phosphates are the most important factor involved.

According to Dr. Daniel A. Okun, head of the Department of Environmental Sciences at the University of North Carolina, phosphate detergents used by 85 per cent of the nation's population have no effect on the waters into which they are discharged. As for the remaining 15 per cent, the aging process would continue even if phosphates were banned, he says.

To date, laws restricting phosphates have been passed in New York, Connecticut, Indiana, Maine and Florida, as well as such major cities as Chicago and Detroit. Legislation is pending on the issue in 16 other states and some 40 cities and counties. In addition, the Federal Trade Commission is considering requiring a warning label on packages of detergents containing phosphates.

Testifying against the proposed regulation at an FTC hearing, Dr. William J. Oswald, professor of public health and sanitary engineering at the University of California in Berkeley, stated bluntly that "there is no evidence that removal of detergent phosphate will preceptibly benefit the environment."

He recommended instead the control of all nutrients entering sensitive bodies of water and, echoing Ruckelshaus, went on to warn:

"When the public finds out—as it must—that in spite of this label there is no detectable change in water pollution and no environmental enhancement, the credibility of all our pollution efforts will suffer."

If so, it would be a high price for a very small victory.

Wage and price increases become self=defeating as the decline in the value of money races ahead of the increases. To some extent, the impact of inflation can be softened by taking advantage of the many inducements offered by merchants to attract customers—special sales and various types of customer bonuses that come under the heading of promotion.

One of the most popular, with both merchants and consumers, is the trading stamp. Millions of housewives have found trading stamps to be an ideal way of setting aside a little extra purchasing power to acquire items that they would otherwise never get in these days of drum-tight family budgets. Unlike saving a few pennies in cash here and there, which magically disappear down the drain of inflation, trading stamps are something apart. Stamps have an irresistable appeal to the thrifty, particularly in times of inflation.

Several years ago, when it began to be apparent that there was wide misunderstanding of the role of promotion and advertising, an official of the nation's largest trading stamp company explained the duel purposes of these adjuncts of the free market. He said, "The purpose of advertising is to inform. The purpose of stamps is to reward--to attract continued patronage by providing an 'extra', a tangible consumer benefit. Although both are--broadly speaking--promotional methods, trading stamps can never substitute for advertising."

Contrary to the claims of antiadvertising-promotion critics, the vital elements of the free market and the mass-production, mass-distribution system, which they support, are genuine friends of all consumers.

CALORIES FOR THE RAILROADS

While press reports have called wide attention to inflationary cost increases and dwindling earnings in one of the most basic elements of the transportation industry--the railroads--and the consequent need of rate increases, there is another side to the story that has received too little attention. It deals with the ready acceptance by the industry of the fact that improved technology and greater efficiency are a necessary counterpart of rate increases in order for rail transportation to move ahead with the times.

The rails are concentrating as never before on upgrading performance. A short time ago, they adopted a comprehensive eight-point program to bring about still further improvements in freight service and make it more attractive to shippers. The head of the Association of American Railroads has called the new program "further evidence of the industry's desire to do everything within its power to give the country the best possible freight service." Among the points included in the program is an all-out campaign to eliminate the arrival of cars at freight yards without waybills and bills arriving without cars. Standardization of reports and development of a standard system of commodity classification of freight cars. A key element of the program will be a pilot demonstration to measure freight service performance involving traffic moving on more than one railroad.

Right now the railroads must have the added calories of rate increases to beef up their financial diet so that they can go ahead with broad-ranging programs of service improvements--improvements that are "...going to take a lot of money...".

NOR ANY DROP
(FIT) TO DRINK

In a massive, 700-page report, a Nader's Raiders task force has severely indicted the quality of America's drinking water. It warns of a "potential crisis in national health" because tens of millions of Americans are drawing their drinking water from "poisoned lakes and streams."

There is a vague awareness, says the report, that toxic chemicals from industrial sources, pesticides, hormones in animal feed, human sewage and thousands of other contaminantsare going into the waterways. Most Americans assume that "somebody" is removing this junk.

"This is not the case," charges the report. "Chemicals and viruses can—and do—pass through municipal purification systems to the household water user."

These contaminants carry not only the risk of disease, but can cause a cancer, birth defects and genetic damage.

If this drives you to drinking bottled water, don't be too hasty.

Calling America's community water supplies the safest in the world and claiming that much bottled water on sale today does not meet U. S. Public Health standards, Eric F. Johnson, executive director of the American Waterworks Association, recently lashed out at some bottled water companies.

He charges THEM not only with potential health hazards but with fraud.

Many utilities, says Johnson, report that bottled water being sold in their areas is nothing but tap water. In some cases, tap water that costs one cent for 22 gallons is simply passed through a cellulose filter and then sold for 70 cents a gallon—a mark-up of 1,600 times.

Well, there's always firewater.

THE RETURN OF JAPAN

It has been slightly over 30 years since the forces of the Japanese Empire launched all-out war in the Pacific Ocean basin in a power search for raw materials and new lands for its teeming millions. The venture was doomed to failure in the military and diplomatic sense. Some four years after the action was begun Japan lay lifeless, stripped of her empire and at the mercy of her antagonists. But the Japanese don't give up easily. With the administrative skill of General Douglas MacArthur easing their dilemma, they fought back. This time it wasn't with arms but with their ability to produce and sell.

Denied the oil of their former conquests, they built ships and bought the services of others and brought in a steady stream of fuel from other areas. They imported the raw goods they needed. And they manufactured and they sold. Their market expanded on a scale that probably was unprecedented. They put the profit-motive system to work.

While they are still practically disarmed, the Japanese have become such giants in the fields of production and economics they are a power to be reckoned with in the Pacific. As the sea might and influence of the British folded and ours diminished, the Japanese moved in to fill a vacuum. Their prestige as a world power has enabled them to tip the balance in Asia. Red China, along with the rest of the world, must realize the potential Japan has for fast rearmament. It could be decisive. Yes, the Japanesee have come a long way since 1945, and they have done it in peace. HLH

Ancient barrier: How long was the Great Wall of China? Well, if it were built in the United States, says the National Geographic Society, it would stretch from Washington, D. C., southward and westward clear across Texas into New Mexico.

Exit lines: "If I had strength to hold a pen, I would write down how easy and pleasant a thing it is to die," said famed Dr. William Hunter. "Why weep you?" said King Louis XIV on his deathbed. "Did you think I should live forever? I thought dying had been harder."

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — More than 100 Congressman --that's almost one out of every four-- collect payments, law fees or dividends from the financial institutions whose returns are affected by congressional action.

One payoff pattern that has gone unnoticed is the strange concentration of interest-free federal deposits in banks affiliated with Congressmen.

Here's how the merry-go-round works:

Congressmen vote appropriations for federal agencies. The agencies deposit the money, interest free, in commercial banks. A disproportionate amount of this federal greenery winds up in banks that have Congressmen as stockholders, officers, directors or attorneys.

Then the banks loan the money to the public at the highest interest the market will bear. Thus, the taxpayers' money is kept circulating in dizzy circles, with he taxpayers often borrowing their own money back at high rates.

If all this sounds complicated, those who pocket money at each turn of the circle would like to keep it that way. But the taxpayers would be wise to take the time to understand what happens o their money.

Congressmen could rid themselves of their banking conflicts, of course, simply by applying the same rules to themselves that they impose upon other federal officials.

A few Congressmen voluntarily do this. Rep. Bill Archer, R-Tex., for example, sold his 267 shares of Heights State Bank stock when he was appointed to the House Banking Committee.

SECRET HOLDINGS

But all too many Congressmen keep their banking ties. The fourth ranking Democrat on he House Banking Committee, for example, is Wisconsin's respected Rep. Henry Reuss. He has earned a reputation as a crusader for public causes.

Yet he not only has retained his banking interests but has failed to report all his bank-related holdings, as required by the new House code of ethics.

He owns a $150,000 interest in the Marshall and Isley Bank Stock Corporation, a holding company which controls 14 banks. His public report to the House, however, mentions only "Marshall and Isley Bank, Milwaukee, Wis., common stock."

Not mentioned is he size of his investment and he fact that he has an interest not only in Marshall and Isley Bank but in 13 others as well.

Reuss also neglected to include in his public report that he has "extensive holdings" in Niagara Shares Corporation and other huge investment trusts. These trusts, like the Reuss banks, are effected by the legislation that comes before him on the Banking Committee.

The flow of interest-free deposits into Marshall and Isley Bank, meanwhile, has increased as Reuss has risen in seniority on the Banking Committee.

Back in 1964, before Reuss reached his present power over banking legislation, Marshall and Isley Bank had no authorizations for most interest-free deposits. But as Reuss's influence grew on the Banking Committee, so did the interest-free deposits in Reuss's banks.

By June 30, 1968, the authorizations had climbed to $2,167,000. By last June 30, they had reached $3,767,000. For a period in 1971, Marshall and Isley had the largest sinble federal time deposit in Wisconsin.

OTHER DEPOSITS

The bank's "tax and loan" accounts also increased from $1,029,433 in 1969 to $10,190,922 in mid-1971. This is tax withholding money which employers deposit in the banks of their own choice. It also includes proceeds from federal securities purchases.

Reuss, to his credit, has urged that these funds be redistributed by the Treasury to small banks and minority-owned banks.

My associate Les Whitten and our consultant, former mortgage banker Martin Price spoke at length with Reuss about the interest-free deposits in his banks.

"This is the first I've heard of it," he snorted. "I can imagine Treasury trying to propitiate me. If they were doing this sort of thing to butter me up, then they obviously would have informed me."

At the Treasury, Fiscal Assistant Secretary John Carlock also denied that the government had political motives in selecting banks for federal deposits. Many deposits, he said, are compensation for banking services performed.

Despite these protestations it remains a fact that only 1 per cent of the nation's 14,000 eligible banks have received the coveted, interest-free deposits. For Congressmen's banks, however, the figures soar to about 20 per cent.

Footnote: In a future column, we will name other Congressmen whose banks have profited from interest-free deposits.

And like Hitler's "big lie," the bigger the static we use, the more likely that people will believe it.

Tell someone that highways are paving over the country at the rate of one million acres a year, as the Sierra Club tells us, and he'll not dispute you. After all, it's obvious; we see it going on all around us. We "know" it's true.

The fact is: Most road building in the past half-century has been in improvements to existing roads, not building new ones.

In 1916, the United States had nearly 3 million miles of roads and streets. Today, while population has doubled and the number of motor vehicles has increased 30-fold, road mileage has increased less than one-fourth to a total of 3.7 million miles.

Even at the high rate of building since the Interstate system began in 1959 — 120 square miles a year — it would take 25,000 years to pave over the country.

Another often-heard example is the claim that 750,000 Americans have been killed by firearms since the turn of the century.

This wholly unsubstantiated statistic seems to have originated in the mind of the author of an antigun book, and a lot of well-meaning people have taken it from there.

The fact is: Nobody knows how many people have been killed by firearms since even as recently as 1960 because the FBI did not begin compiling data until 1961. Only very limited and incomplete figures exist for the years back to 1910, and they do not always distinguish between handguns and long guns, between deaths due to firearms and deaths due to explosives or between homicides and accidents.

Somewhat smaller, but still impressive, is the statistic of 700,000 children allegedly injured by toys every year. This oft-repeated charge originated in a staff report of the National Commission on Product Safety in June, 1970.

The fact is: The figure is a sheer "projection" — that is, a guesstimate — based on an assumption that toys cause 3.5 per cent of all household accidents.

But no one really knows the number of accidents connected with toys, both because no one has ever counted them and because it is not alwasy easy to attribute the cause of an accident.

If a child carrying a toy falls down a flight of steps and is injured by the toy, did the toy really cause the injury?

There definitely are dangerous toys, and government and responsible manufacturers are trying to eliminate them. But nothing is helped by throwing around alarming and meaningless figures.

A different kind of statistic is the one that is true enough as far as it goes, but some people go too far with it — for instance, the lamentable fact that the United States ranks something like 15th among industrial nations in infant mortality, behind such nations as Sweden, Norway, Finland and Switzerland.

Can the United States, with 200 million people, with its large minority groups, its big cities and vast farmlands, its slums, its Appalachia, its diverse climate, be compared with a country like Switzerland?

But it is, if a statistic is needed to prove a point or grind an ax.

No,'taint't what we know that hurts us so much. It's what we know that just ain't so.

One of our hard-nosed banker relatives is sending us an economic report which sometimes curls our hair. Here's a portion of the report that is "Advice To Businessmen":

"Those who are in executive capacities in business enterprises have perhaps the most difficult task of all. It is incumbent upon them to anticipate events furthest into the future. Unlike the investor who can quickly change course, businessmen must make seemingly almost irrevocable decisions on the basis of inadequate information. Planning for business cannot wait until all the signs are clear. Any businessman must immediately after New Year's take into consideration all of '72 and beyond. It is these people that we address ourselves with longer term advice.

"As we stated earlier, the precise form, degree, duration of the troubles is not clear. As stated many times, we do not anticipate a period of wild, run-away inflation prior to a sharp economic downturn and possible deflation. Therefore, our advice to businessmen for the coming year and beyond would be defensive:

"1. All of the moves you take and all of the plans should be designed not to lose control of your business. By that, we mean when you expand in any area you, of necessity, surrender some control over your destiny to the consumer, supplier, banker, etc. Limit your expansion to the degree wherein your destiny is still your own.

"2. Watch your receivables. Tighten your credit business standards. Do not be unduly disturbed if your competitor seemingly gets more business for a period of time. When the period of economic difficulties arrives, you will survive. He may not.

"3. Similarly, watch your own payables. Do not let your suppliers be able to put you out of business if and when they become desperate.

"4. It is not necessary, in our view, to build anticipatory inventories to a great degree. Our economic outlook is not that optimistic, but more important, when difficult times do arrive and money becomes more valuable than goods, then you will not have any problem fulfilling your inventory needs from over-extended suppliers.

"5. This is not the time, in our judgment, to engage in a heavy expansion program of plant and equipment. Nothing is more onerous than paying interest on the debt of under-utilized capacity. Watch your fixed debt. Try to reduce it as much as possible. Don't overdraw your welcome at the bank by being in a precarious position while you can help it. There may come a time when you cannot help it.

"In summary, don't let your emotions rule you. Watch your business. What is it really like? - not what everyone is telling you it should be like, but what is it really like? Even if the President of the United States tells you that we are enjoying a boom but you, in your own business, show only modest activity, trust your own figures and prepare and plan accordingly."

LET EVERYONE
KEEP HIS HEAD

Extremism in the name of ecology is not virtue. It could, in fact, result in an "eco-backlash."

This was the warning issued by William D. Ruckleshaus, administrator of the new federal Environmental Protection Agency, at the recent 66th annual convention of the National Audubon Society.

In the past, environmental reformers might be excused an occasional exaggeration as a way of getting the public to listen. "The great danger now," he says, "Is that by overplaying their hand, activists, will lost their credibility and many of our hard-won gains will be lost or vitiated."

An example of environmental extremism may be the current campaign against phosphates in detergents.

No one disputes the fact that, as nutrients, the chemicals contribute to the early aging of lakes by stimulating the excessive growth of algae. Scientists are not agreed, however, on whether phosphates are the most important factor involved.

According to Dr. Daniel A. Okun, head of the Department of Environmental Sciences at the University of North Carolina, phosphate detergents used by 85 per cent of the nation's population have no effect on the waters into which they are discharged. As for the remaining 15 per cent, the aging process would continue even if phosphates were banned, he says.

To date, laws restricting phosphates have been passed in New York, Connecticut, Indiana, Maine and Florida, as well as such major cities as Chicago and Detroit. Legislation is pending on the issue in 16 other states and some 40 cities and counties. In addition, the Federal Trade Commission is considering requiring a warning label on packages of detergents containing phosphates.

Testifying against the proposed regulation at an FTC hearing, Dr. William J. Oswald, professor of public health and sanitary engineering at the University of California in Berkeley, stated bluntly that "there is no evidence that removal of detergent phosphate will preceptibly benefit the environment."

He recommended instead the control of all nutrients entering sensitive bodies of water and, echoing Ruckelshaus, went on to warn:

"When the public finds out—as it must—that in spite of this label there is no detectable change in water pollution and no environmental enhancement, the credibility of all our pollution efforts will suffer."

If so, it would be a high price for a very small victory.

Wage and price increases become self=defeating as the decline in the value of money races ahead of the increases. To some extent, the impact of inflation can be softened by taking advantage of the many inducements offered by merchants to attract customers—special sales and various types of customer bonuses that come under the heading of promotion.

One of the most popular, with both merchants and consumers, is the trading stamp. Millions of housewives have found trading stamps to be an ideal way of setting aside a little extra purchasing power to acquire items that they would otherwise never get in these days of drum-tight family budgets. Unlike saving a few pennies in cash here and there, which magically disappear down the drain of inflation, trading stamps are something apart. Stamps have an irresistable appeal to the thrifty, particularly in times of inflation.

Several years ago, when it began to be apparent that there was wide misunderstanding of the role of promotion and advertising, an official of the nation's largest trading stamp company explained the duel purposes of these adjuncts of the free market. He said, "The purpose of advertising is to inform. The purpose of stamps is to reward--to attract continued patronage by providing an 'extra', a tangible consumer benefit. Although both are--broadly speaking--promotional methods, trading stamps can never substitute for advertising."

Contrary to the claims of antiadvertising-promotion critics, the vital elements of the free market and the mass-production, mass-distribution system, which they support, are genuine friends of all consumers.

CALORIES FOR THE RAILROADS

While press reports have called wide attention to inflationary cost increases and dwindling earnings in one of the most basic elements of the transportation industry--the railroads--and the consequent need of rate increases, there is another side to the story that has received too little attention. It deals with the ready acceptance by the industry of the fact that improved technology and greater efficiency are a necessary counterpart of rate increases in order for rail transportation to move ahead with the times.

The rails are concentrating as never before on upgrading performance. A short time ago, they adopted a comprehensive eight-point program to bring about still further improvements in freight service and make it more attractive to shippers. The head of the Association of American Railroads has called the new program "further evidence of the industry's desire to do everything within its power to give the country the best possible freight service." Among the points included in the program is an all-out campaign to eliminate the arrival of cars at freight yards without waybills and bills arriving without cars. Standardization of reports and development of a standard system of commodity classification of freight cars. A key element of the program will be a pilot demonstration to measure freight service performance involving traffic moving on more than one railroad.

Right now the railroads must have the added calories of rate increases to beef up their financial diet so that they can go ahead with broad-ranging programs of service improvements--improvements that are "...going to take a lot of money...".

NOR ANY DROP
(FIT) TO DRINK

In a massive, 700-page report, a Nader's Raiders task force has severely indicted the quality of America's drinking water. It warns of a "potential crisis in national health" because tens of millions of Americans are drawing their drinking water from "poisoned lakes and streams."

There is a vague awareness, says the report, that toxic chemicals from industrial sources, pesticides, hormones in animal feed, human sewage and thousands of other contaminantsare going into the waterways. Most Americans assume that "somebody" is removing this junk.

"This is not the case," charges the report. "Chemicals and viruses can—and do—pass through municipal purification systems to the household water user."

These contaminants carry not only the risk of disease, but can cause a cancer, birth defects and genetic damage.

If this drives you to drinking bottled water, don't be too hasty.

Calling America's community water supplies the safest in the world and claiming that much bottled water on sale today does not meet U. S. Public Health standards, Eric F. Johnson, executive director of the American Waterworks Association, recently lashed out at some bottled water companies.

He charges THEM not only with potential health hazards but with fraud.

Many utilities, says Johnson, report that bottled water being sold in their areas is nothing but tap water. In some cases, tap water that costs one cent for 22 gallons is simply passed through a cellulose filter and then sold for 70 cents a gallon—a mark-up of 1,600 times.

Well, there's always firewater.

THE RETURN OF JAPAN

It has been slightly over 30 years since the forces of the Japanese Empire launched all-out war in the Pacific Ocean basin in a power search for raw materials and new lands for its teeming millions. The venture was doomed to failure in the military and diplomatic sense. Some four years after the action was begun Japan lay lifeless, stripped of her empire and at the mercy of her antagonists. But the Japanese don't give up easily. With the administrative skill of General Douglas MacArthur easing their dilemma, they fought back. This time it wasn't with arms but with their ability to produce and sell.

Denied the oil of their former conquests, they built ships and bought the services of others and brought in a steady stream of fuel from other areas. They imported the raw goods they needed. And they manufactured and they sold. Their market expanded on a scale that probably was unprecedented. They put the profit-motive system to work.

While they are still practically disarmed, the Japanese have become such giants in the fields of production and economics they are a power to be reckoned with in the Pacific. As the sea might and influence of the British folded and ours diminished, the Japanese moved in to fill a vacuum. Their prestige as a world power has enabled them to tip the balance in Asia. Red China, along with the rest of the world, must realize the potential Japan has for fast rearmament. It could be decisive. Yes, the Japanesee have come a long way since 1945, and they have done it in peace. HLH

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — More than 100 Congressman --that's almost one out of every four-- collect payments; law fees or dividends from the financial institutions whose returns are affected by congressional action.

One payoff pattern that has gone unnoticed is the strange concentration of interest-free federal deposits in banks affiliated with Congressmen.

Here's how the merry-go-round works:

Congressmen vote appropriations for federal agencies. The agencies deposit the money, interest free, in commercial banks. A disproportionate amount of this federal greenery winds up in banks that have Congressmen as stockholders, officers, directors or attorneys.

Then the banks loan the money to the public at the highest interest the market will bear. Thus, the taxpayers' money is kept circulating in dizzy circles, with he taxpayers often borrowing their own money back at high rates.

If all this sounds complicated, those who pocket money at each turn of the circle would like to keep it that way. But the taxpayers would be wise to take the time to understand what happens o their money.

Congressmen could rid themselves of their banking conflicts, of course, simply by applying the same rules to themselves that they impose upon other federal officials.

A few Congressmen voluntarily do this. Rep. Bill Archer, R-Tex., for example, sold his 267 shares of Heights State Bank stock when he was appointed to the House Banking Committee.

SECRET HOLDINGS

But all too many Congressmen keep their banking ties. The fourth ranking Democrat on he House Banking Committee, for example, is Wisconsin's respected Rep. Henry Reuss. He has earned a reputation as a crusader for public causes.

Yet he not only has retained his banking interests but has failed to report all his bank-related holdings, as required by the new House code of ethics.

He owns a $150,000 interest in the Marshall and Isley Bank Stock Corporation, a holding company which controls 14 banks. His public report to the House, however, mentions only "Marshall and Isley Bank, Milwaukee, Wis., common stock."

Not mentioned is he size of his investment and he fact that he has an interest not only in Marshall and Isley Bank but in 13 others as well.

Reuss also neglected to include in his public report that he has "extensive holdings" in Niagara Shares Corporation and other huge investment trusts. These trusts, like the Reuss banks, are effected by the legislation that comes before him on the Banking Committee.

The flow of interest-free deposits into Marshall and Isley Bank, meanwhile, has increased as Reuss has risen in seniority on the Banking Committee.

Back in 1964, before Reuss reached his present power over banking legislation, Marshall and Isley Bank had no authorizations for most interest-free deposits. But as Reuss's influence grew on the Banking Committee, so did the interest-free deposits in Reuss's banks.

By June 30, 1968, the authorizations had climbed to $2,167,000. By last June 30, they had reached $3,767,000. For a period in 1971, Marshall and Isley had the largest sinble federal time deposit in Wisconsin.

OTHER DEPOSITS

The bank's "tax and loan" accounts also increased from $1,029,433 in 1969 to $10,190,922 in mid-1971. This is tax withholding money, which employers deposit in the banks of their own choice. It also includes proceeds from federal securities purchases.

Reuss, to his credit, has urged that these funds be redistributed by the Treasury to small banks and minority-owned banks.

My associate Les Whitten and our consultant, former mortgage banker Martin Price, spoke at length with Reuss about the interest-free deposits in his banks.

"This is the first I've heard of it," he snorted. "I can't imagine Treasury trying to propitiate me. If they were doing this sort of thing to butter me up, then they obviously would have informed me."

At the Treasury, Fiscal Assistant Secretary John Carlock also denied that the government had political motives in selecting banks for federal deposits. Many deposits, he said, are compensation for banking services performed.

Despite these protestations, it remains a fact that only 9 per cent of the nation's 14,000 eligible banks have received the coveted, interest-free deposits. For Congressmen's banks, however, the figures soar to about 20 per cent.

Footnote: In a future column, we will name other Congressmen whose banks have profited from interest-free deposits.

Fire Chars North Side Of Maryville Square

MARYVILLE, Mo. (AP) — A major fire struck downtown Maryville Tuesday night, leaving much of the north side of the town square in charred ruins.

The fire was discovered at 7:30 p.m. and before it could be brought under control more than two hours later, it had destroyed or damaged nine businesses and seven of the block's 10 store fronts.

No injuries were reported.

The 90-year-old Bainum Hotel was threatened for a time and guests were evacuated. The hotel reportedly suffered considerable smoke and water damage.

Firemen from at least 12 communities responded to the blaze in the northwest Missouri community of 9,800. Included were units from Clarinda, Iowa, 40 miles to the north were hampered by temperatures that dropped to 3 above zero by 10 p.m. The chill index was reportedly 15 below zero, one fire plug was frozen solid, and firemen had some trouble with hoses and equipment freezing.

Flames leaped more than 100 feet in the air at the height of the blaze, and the fire could be seen more than 20 miles away.

Officials said the blaze originated in the Holt Supply Co., a farm equipment and appliance store.

Other busineses hit by the blaze were the Western Auto Store, the Maryville Shoe Co., Warren Jones Drugs, Merle Norman Cosmetics Studio and Sheri's Beauty Salon. Heavy smoke and water damage was reported at the Bainum Hotel, Jim's Inn and Robey Insurance Co.

Warren Jones Drugs was operated by 99-year-old Waren Jones, who had been in business at that location 82 years.

Also threatened was the Fields Clothing Co., P.N. Hirsh Clothing Co., and Condon Drug Store, located on the opposite end of the block from the hotel.

A snorkle truck from the St. Joseph Power and Light Co., was pressed into service, with firemen running a hose to the top to pour water on top of the two-story buildings. Maryville is 44 miles north of St. Joseph.

The fire was discovered by Don Baker, 22, a student at Northwest Missouri State College in Maryville. Baker was working at Phares Oil Co., which is located directly behind the stores. Firemen were concerned for a time the fire would spread to the service station.

Maryville firemen also were assisted by fire units from the Missouri communities of St. Joseph, Savannah, Skidmore, Hopkins, Fairfax, Grant City, Burlington Junction, Oregon, Stanberry and Ravenwood, and Clarinda, Iowa.

A major fire two years ago this month destroyed two buildings just half a block from the site of Tuesday night's blaze.

Muskie Announcement Draws 'Bad-Mouthing U.S.' Charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, coy no more, has begun his declared campaign for the White House, summoning Americans to "a new beginning" while a top Republican accused him of "bad-mouthing the United States."

The Maine Democrat formally announced his candidacy -- obvious for a year -- on $30,000 worth of nationwide television time Tuesday night.

"I am seeking the presidency not merely to change presidents, but to change the country," Muskie said in his 10-minute announcement. "I intend to lead – to ask you to make American what it was to Abraham Lincoln -- 'the last best hope of mankind.'

"Ultimately, of course, what is at stake is your future," he said. "I am not telling you that I can guarantee the best of all possible worlds. All I am asking is that we pledge a new beginning."

Muskie did not mention his Democratic rivals, and he said "it would be foolish to blame all the nation's ills on the present administration."

But he said if President Nixon's administration "had been candid with the country, if they had been straightforward, we could have done far more than we have.

Republican National Chairman Robert J. Dole said Muskie seeks to win in 1972 by "stirring fear, exploiting divisiveness and condemning the good, all the while pretending that America's weaknesses and problems are President Nixon's and not his own."

Muskie recorded his announcement Monday at this chilly summer home in Kennebunk Beach, Maine. It was followed by a brief, televised appeal for campaign contributions, to help pay for a race that already has cost well over $1 million.

It is a campaign that has taken Muskie to 34 states since Labor Day as an unannounced contender.

Muskie has gained endorsements from some key party leaders, but his candidacy will face its crucial test in the primary elections ahead.

After a news conference today in Washinton and a fund-raising dinner in New York tonight, he heads for New Hampshire to file candidacy for a March 7 leadoff primary in his native New England.

In New Hampshire Tuesday, former Massachusetts Gov. Endicott Peabody made known his aspirations by filing petitions for the Democratic nomination for vice president.

"It is constitutionally the second most important post in the land, Peabody said. "The vice president should be selected by the people .. not in a back, smoke - filled room."

Rep. Paul McCloskey continued his campaign through the state, talking to high schoolers in Franklin, N.H., where he told one student he would welcome Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., on a national ticket as either vice president or president.

Responding to a question as to whether he'd run with a minority candidate, McCloskey said "I would be proud to have Ed Brooke as my running mate or to be his running mate if he should challenge President Nixon."

Meanwhile, Ohio Sen. Robert Taft announced in Columbus his withdrawal as a favorite son in the state's primary in May.

"The President's indication on television, and other current reliable information, now makes it clear that Mr. Nixon will allow his name to appear on the Ohio ballot as a pledged candidate for the presidential nomination," Taft said.

In Florida, where the primary will be held March 14, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey's spokesman said the former vice president will file for candidacy next Monday.

Fellow Democratic hopeful Sen. Henry M. Jackson stumped across northern Florida saying a vote for Alabama Gov. George Wallace would amount to a vote for Nixon. The area went heavily for Wallace in 1968.

Wallace is not announced for the Florida campaign, but Jackson said he was sure Wallace would be running and he told newsmen in Tallahassee, at the start of a three - day swing toward Pensacola, voters would be 'wasting" their ballots on a vote for Wallace.

And, back in New Hampshire, there appeared the face of comedian Pat Paulsen in Manchester to announce a serious candidacy this presidential year.

In 1968, Paulsen ran a tongue -in -cheek campaign that drew too few votes to be recorded officially.

The 44 - year - old comedian said he would get petitions signed in the streets before the Thursday deadline.

"The fact that a comedian is running for office is not so strange," Paulsen said.

Bank Liquidation Begins

SAVANNAH, Mo. (AP) — Liquidation of the First Community State Bank of Savannah began Tuesday with several hundred depositors collecting on their accounts and an attorney for bank stockholders questioning the need for liquidation.

Officials of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation had checks ready up to $20,000 for any depositor who had that much money in the bank.

"There were only a few who had more than that," said David C. Stickerod, supervising liquidator for the FDIC.

He said there were 1,961 claimants for the $3,488,000 deposited in the bank—or an average of $1,750 each.

Savannah attorney John W. Newhart, representing majority bank stockholders, said one person had $106,000 on deposit and a couple of others had between $30,000 and $40,000.

Newhart said he is considering filing a show cause motion against H. Duane Pemberton, state commissioner of finance, who ordered the bank closed Dec. 30.

"The division of finance has said publicly that there are no shortages, no dishonesty and no embezzlement at this bank," Newhart said.

He said three different banker groups had offered to buy the bank.

"Now I ask you, do bankers buy anything but a sure bet?", Newhart asked. "This bank will liquidate right on the money. It's all there. It's my contention that there was no need for liquidation." Pemberton was not available for comment.

FBI Leak Probe Centers On National Security Council

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI investigation into the latest leaks of highly classified information to newsmen is centered on the National Security Council headed by presidential adviser Henry Kissinger, administration sources say.

The FBI was ordered into the case last week when columnist Jack Anderson began publishing what he said were verbatim notes of high-level White House conferences and meetings involving American policy decisions in the India-Pakistan war and the Middle East situation.

The White House has never acknowledged the Anderson reports but there never has been a denial of their contents and officials are known to be seriously concerned about the disclosures.

The FBI, which will not comment on ongoing investigations, is said by the sources to have checked the departments of State and Defense last week and found no evidence the leaks to Anderson came from either agency.

When asked if this left the investigation in the Natiinal Security Council, the sources said yes, but they would not say if the search has narrowed to any particular person.

There has been no use of lie detectors, some officials say, and the investigation at State and the Pentagon was far more routine than in earlier incidents.

In the last reported FBI search last summer, lie-detector tests were given several officials, including four in the State Department, in trying to determine the source of a published story dealing with U.S.Soviet arms-limitation talks.

It was learned subsequently that State and Defense were cleared in that incident and the leak was traced to the National Security Council.

In his columns Anderson has released some of the contents of notes taken of meetings involving Kisinger, high State Department officials and other important government officials.

Fire Chars North Side Of Maryville Square

MARYVILLE, Mo. (AP) — A major fire struck downtown Maryville Tuesday night, leaving much of the north side of the town square in charred ruins.

The fire was discovered at 7:30 p.m. and before it could be brought under control more than two hours later, it had destroyed or damaged nine businesses and seven of the block's 10 store fronts.

No injuries were reported.

The 90-year-old Bainum Hotel was threatened for a time and guests were evacuated. The hotel reportedly suffered considerable smoke and water damage.

Firemen from at least 12 communities responded to the blaze in the northwest Missouri community of 9,800. Included were units from Clarinda, Iowa, 40 miles to the north were hampered by temperatures that dropped to 3 above zero by 10 p.m. The chill index was reportedly 15 below zero, one fire plug was frozen solid, and firemen had some trouble with hoses and equipment freezing.

Flames leaped more than 100 feet in the air at the height of the blaze, and the fire could be seen more than 20 miles away.

Officials said the blaze originated in the Holt Supply Co., a farm equipment and appliance store.

Other busineses hit by the blaze were the Western Auto Store, the Maryville Shoe Co., Warren Jones Drugs, Merle Norman Cosmetics Studio and Sheri's Beauty Salon. Heavy smoke and water damage was reported at the Bainum Hotel, Jim's Inn and Robey Insurance Co.

Warren Jones Drugs was operated by 99-year-old Waren Jones, who had been in business at that location 82 years.

Also threatened was the Fields Clothing Co., P.N. Hirsh Clothing Co., and Condon Drug Store, located on the opposite end of the block from the hotel.

A snorkle truck from the St. Joseph Power and Light Co., was pressed into service, with firemen running a hose to the top to pour water on top of the two-story buildings. Maryville is 44 miles north of St. Joseph.

The fire was discovered by Don Baker, 22, a student at Northwest Missouri State College in Maryville. Baker was working at Phares Oil Co., which is located directly behind the stores. Firemen were concerned for a time the fire would spread to the service station.

Maryville firemen also were assisted by fire units from the Missouri communities of St. Joseph, Savannah, Skidmore, Hopkins, Fairfax, Grant City, Burlington Junction, Oregon, Stanberry and Ravenwood, and Clarinda, Iowa.

A major fire two years ago this month destroyed two buildings just half a block from the site of Tuesday night's blaze.

Muskie Announcement Draws 'Bad-Mouthing U.S.' Charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, coy no more, has begun his declared campaign for the White House, summoning Americans to "a new beginning" while a top Republican accused him of "bad-mouthing the United States."

The Maine Democrat formally announced his candidacy -- obvious for a year -- on $30,000 worth of nationwide television time Tuesday night.

"I am seeking the presidency not merely to change presidents, but to change the country," Muskie said in his 10-minute announcement. "I intend to lead - to ask you to make American what it was to Abraham Lincoln -- 'the last best hope of mankind.'

"Ultimately, of course, what is at stake is your future," he said. "I am not telling you that I can guarantee the best of all possible worlds. All I am asking is that we pledge a new beginning."

Muskie did not mention his Democratic rivals, and he said "it would be foolish to blame all the nation's ills on the present administration."

But he said if President Nixon's administration "had been candid with the country, if they had been straightforward, we could have done far more than we have.

Republican National Chairman Robert J. Dole said Muskie seeks to win in 1972 by "stirring fear, exploiting divisiveness and condemning the good, all the while pretending that America's weaknesses and problems are President Nixon's and not his own."

Muskie recorded his announcement Monday at this chilly summer home in Kennebunk Beach, Maine. It was followed by a brief, televised appeal for campaign contributions, to help pay for a race that already has cost well over $1 million.

It is a campaign that has taken Muskie to 34 states since Labor Day as an unannounced contender.

Muskie has gained endorsements from some key party leaders, but his candidacy will face its crucial test in the primary elections ahead.

After a news conference today in Washinton and a fund-raising dinner in New York tonight, he heads for New Hampshire to file candidacy for a March 7 leadoff primary in his native New England.

In New Hampshire Tuesday, former Massachusetts Gov. Endicott Peabody made known his aspirations by filing petitions for the Democratic nomination for vice president.

"It is constitutionally the second most important post in the land, Peabody said. "The vice president should be selected by the people .. not in a back, smoke - filled room."

Rep. Paul McCloskey continued his campaign through the state, talking to high schoolers in Franklin, N.H., where he told one student he would welcome Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., on a national ticket as either vice president or president.

Responding to a question as to whether he'd run with a minority candidate, McCloskey said "I would be proud to have Ed Brooke as my running mate or to be his running mate if he should challenge President Nixon."

Meanwhile, Ohio Sen. Robert Taft announced in Columbus his withdrawal as a favorite son in the state's primary in May.

"The President's indication on television, and other current reliable information, now makes it clear that Mr. Nixon will allow his name to appear on the Ohio ballot as a pledged candidate for the presidential nomination," Taft said.

In Florida, where the primary will be held March 14, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey's spokesman said the former vice president will file for candidacy next Monday.

Fellow Democratic hopeful Sen. Henry M. Jackson stumped across northern Florida saying a vote for Alabama Gov. George Wallace would amount to a vote for Nixon. The area went heavily for Wallace in 1968.

Wallace is not announced for the Florida campaign, but Jackson said he was sure Wallace would be running and he told newsmen in Tallahassee, at the start of a three - day swing toward Pensacola, voters would be ',wasting" their ballots on a vote for Wallace.

And, back in New Hampshire, there appeared the face of comedian Pat Paulsen in Manchester to announce a serious candidacy this presidential year.

In 1968, Paulsen ran a tongue -in -cheek campaign that drew too few votes to be recorded officially.

The 44 - year - old comedian said he would get petitions signed in the streets before the Thursday deadline.

"The fact that a comedian is running for office is not so strange," Paulsen said.

Bank Liquidation Begins

SAVANNAH, Mo. (AP) — Liquidation of the First Community State Bank of Savannah began Tuesday with several hundred depositors collecting on their accounts and an attorney for bank stockholders questioning the need for liquidation.

Officials of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation had checks ready up to $20,000 for any depositor who had that much money in the bank.

"There were only a few who had more than that," said David C. Stickerod, supervising liquidator for the FDIC.

He said there were 1,961 claimants for the $3,488,000 deposited in the bank—or an average of $1,750 each.

Savannah attorney John W. Newhart, representing majority bank stockholders, said one person had $106,000 on deposit and a couple of others had between $30,000 and $40,000.

Newhart said he is considering filing a show cause motion against H. Duane Pemberton, state commissioner of finance, who ordered the bank closed Dec. 30.

"The division of finance has said publicly that there are no shortages, no dishonesty and no embezzlement at this bank," Newhart said.

He said three different banker groups had offered to buy the bank.

"Now I ask you, do bankers buy anything but a sure bet?", Newhart asked. "This bank will liquidate right on the money. It's all there. It's my contention that there was no need for liquidation." Pemberton was not available for comment.

FBI Leak Probe Centers On National Security Council

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI investigation into the latest leaks of highly classified information to newsmen is centered on the National Security Council headed by presidential adviser Henry Kissinger, administration sources say.

The FBI was ordered into the case last week when columnist Jack Anderson began publishing what he said were verbatim notes of high-level White House conferences and meetings involving American policy decisions in the India-Pakistan war and the Middle East situation.

The White House has never acknowledged the Anderson reports but there never has been a denial of their contents and officials are known to be seriously concerned about the disclosures.

The FBI, which will not comment on ongoing investigations, is said by the sources to have checked the departments of State and Defense last week and found no evidence the leaks to Anderson came from either agency.

When asked if this left the investigation in the Natiinal Security Council, the sources said yes, but they would not say if the search has narrowed to any particular person.

There has been no use of lie detectors, some officials say, and the investigation at State and the Pentagon was far more routine than in earlier incidents.

In the last reported FBI search last summer, lie-detector tests were given several officials, including four in the State Department, in trying to determine the source of a published story dealing with U.S.Soviet arms-limitation talks.

It was learned subsequently that State and Defense were cleared in that incident and the leak was traced to the National Security Council.

In his columns Anderson has released some of the contents of notes taken of meetings involving Kisinger, high State Department officials and other important government officials.

Durham-Lane

MEMPHIS, Tenn. - The chapel of St. Luke's United Methodist church in Memphis was the setting Dec. 22 for the wedding of Margaret Elizabeth "Beth" Lane and Charles Patrick Durham.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lee Lane of Memphis. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Herbert Durham of Memphis.

Dr. Lloyd Ramer officiated at the ceremony. Music was by Mrs. Carlton Wilkes, organist, and Valerie Gamble and Gail Davis, vocalists.

The bride was given away by her father. She wore a gown of white satin and lace with sleeves gathered into buttoned cuffs, a fitted bodice and full midi-length skirt. A satin and lace cap held a shoulder- length veil with cascading organza bells. She carried red roses and her mothers bible.

Mrs. Harold Lee Lane, Jr. of Columbia, S.C. was her sister-in-laws only attendant.

Frank Burt of Memphis was best man. Ushers were John Durham, the bridegrooms brother and Hal Lane, Jr. of Columbia, S.C., the brides brother.

Serving at the church reception following the ceremony were Paulette Tomlinson, Shirley Jones, Ellyn Ball and Mrs. Ken Crill, all of Memphis.

Among those attending the wedding were the brides grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Kirk of Sikeston, Mo. and Mr. and Mrs. J.J. McSally of Fredericktown, Mo.

The couple is living at 1304 Court, Memphis.

Crash Survivor Only One Of 92

LIMA, Peru AP - A 17-year-old girl survived an airliner crash in the Peruvian Jungle on Christmas Eve, wandered for days in the tropical rain forest, swam across flodded areas and waded through swamps, then built a raft that carried her to a wood cutters's camp.

Juliane Koepcke, the daughter of two noted German-born ornithologists, was brought to the jungle colony of Tourna-vista Tuesday by two wood-cutters who found her semi-conscious, floating down the Pachitea River aboard the log and vine raft. From here she was flown to a U.S. missionary center at Pucallpa, 500 miles northeast of Lima, and reunited with her father.

Her mother is missing in the crash.

Juliane's father, Dr. Hans Koepcke, and her mother had lived in Peru for more than 20 years and were the leading authorities on Peruvian birds.

The girl was reported suffering from hungar, but she seemed to be in fair shape. She had made many trips in the jungle with her parents, and the couple she lived with while attending high school in Lima.

So far she is the only survivor of 92 persons who were aboard an Electra turboprop that crashed 12 days ago on a flight from Lima to Pucallpa and Iquitos. Aerial and ground searchers redoubled their efforts today, seeking the wreck-age but officials said there was no indication the girl saw any other survivors.

The plane was operated by a Peruvian airline, Lineas Aereas Nacionales, and five U.S. citizens from the missionary center at Pucallpa were among the passengers.

Amanda de Pina, a nurse at a medical post in Tournavista, said Juliane had only a partial memory of the crash andher harrowing 10-day trek through the jungle. She remembered looking out the window and seeing an engine afire, then the airliner lurched and she suddenly found herself flying through the air.

The next thing the girl remembered, the nurse said, was waking up amid the wreckage, still strapped to her seat and covered by the bodies of three or four other passengers.

Freeing herself from the seat and bodies, the terrified girl ran from the scene, stopping only to pick up a Christmas cake which she had been bringing to her father.

Suffering from a number of cuts, the girl walked for several days following a stream, sometimes swinning across flooded areas and wading through swamps.

The cake lasted three days. After that Juliane ate nothing, the nurse said.

Finally she arrived at the Pachitea River, a tributary of the Amazon. There the young survivor built a crude raft of logs tied together with vines and launched it into the current.

It was not immediately known how many days Juliane spent aboard the raft, but the woodcutters- Amado Pereyra and Marcio Ribera-reported that she was scarcely able to identify herself when she reached their camp Monday.

Pat In Ghana

By FRANCES LEWINE

ACCRA, Ghana AP - Pat Nixon arrived in Ghana's capital today for the second stop on her three-nation West African tour.

The U.S. First Lady flew to Accra from Monrovia, Liberia, where she led the U.S. delegation to the inauguration of President William R. Tolbert.

Tolbert said goodbye to her at a white tie banquet for 396 guests.

Mrs. Nixon will stay in Ghana two days, going Friday to Abidjan, capital of the Ivory Coast.

Mrs. Nixon wore her new green-sashed Liberian decoration on a yellow lace evening dress for the farewell party Tuesday night. And Tolbert presented the Grand Band of the Star of Africa to evangelist Billy Graham who had borrowed that decoration from Tolbert's brother to wear to the inaugural ball Monday night as a substitute for another Liberian decoration he had left at home.

The three-day inaugural festivities concluded with fireworks lighting the sky of the ocean-front capital.

A high spot of Mrs. Nixon's last day in Liberia was a colorful special performance of tribal dancing, singing and drumming presented on a fifth floor terrance of the executive mansion and office building.

The women ended the show by dressing up Mrs. Nixon in their native costume, including a large head scarf. She pirouetted and modeled it before them and warmly shook hands all around as they made an approving clatter with drums and rattles.

Ann Landers

Kudos To Ann From Al-Anon

Dear Ann Landers: A few years ago my husband and I were running a mail-order pornography business. At the time, I thought nothing of posing for nude pictures and acting in stag movies. These pictures and movies were sold to customers all over the United States.

We are no longer in the business and I am very ashamed of my past. It's difficult now for me to understand how I could have been so foolish. The point is -- I am worried sick that someone somewhere will recognize me. Every time we attend a social function or meet new friends, I'm a wreck. Is there any way I can rid myself of this terrible fear? ---Miserable In Missouri

Dear M.in M.: Time is your greatest ally. Chances are that it has already covered your tracks. My advice is, change the color of your hair (if you haven't already done so) --and keep your clothes on, Lady.

Dear Ann Landers: Last August you published an enthusiastic and grateful letter from a woman who learned about Al-Anon through your column. Within one month we received nearly, 10,000 letters as a direct result of that one mention.

The timing was nothing less than miraculous. Had it occurred before our recent move, we'd have been paralyzed by the lack of space. As it is, there is scarcely a place which is not occupied by staff or volunteers sorting the letters by states, cities, and towns, thanks to you.

Volunteers have responded nobly. Without them, heaven knows how this beautiful crisis could have been met. There will be no way to get an exact count of how many new members will join Al-Anon as a result of that single letter in your column. There is little doubt that Al-Anon has no more effective and enthusiastic friend in all the world than Ann Landers. Long may she live and write her spirited columns! --The Staff

Dear Staff: Thanks for those kind words. Now, get ready for more mail.

For all you readers out there who are living with an alcoholic, I urge you to write to the National Headquarters of this splendid organization, Al-Anon. You might also learn how to help him or her win the battle of the bottle. The address is Al-Anon Family Group Headquarters, Inc., Dept. B, P.O. Box 182, Madison Square Sation, New York, New York 10010. Write for a free booklet. And Please enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Postage can run into money. Take it from someone who knows.

Dear Ann Landers: Please settle a serious difficult of opinion in our family. You don't need to go into any long scientific explanations, just a yes or no will be sufficient. The questions are as follows.

(1) Can two adults with straight hair produce a child with tight ringlets?

(2) Can two adults with very light blonde hair produce a childe whose hair is dark brown.

Everything I have read indicates that the answer to both these questions is NO. What do you say? -- Facts Wanted

Dear F.W.: I don't know what you have been reading but the answer to both questions is yes.

Confidential to Finders Keepers: Sorry, I don't think much of your "logic." The rest of the saying is ---"Losers Weepers." Do you want to be responsible for all those tears?

Mountaintop Wedding

BOISE, Idaho (AP) - The bride didn't walk down the aisle at this wedding. In fact, neither did the groom, best man, matron of honor nor the 30 guests in attendance.

They all rode a chair lift.

Lee Grimes married Diane Seears on New Year's Eve atop a foggy mountain at the Bogus Basin Ski Resort near Boise.

"It has never been done before," explained the groom.

"We wanted to be closer to God," said the bride.

All but one of the wedding party skied back down the mountain after the Boise couple exchanged marriage vows.

The new Mrs. Grimes opted for a toboggan. She doesn't know how to ski.

Cronkite Comments

NEW YORK AP - Walter Cronkite says the fashion promoters who voted him one of the nation's best dressed men didn't know about the pants he wears as anchor man for his nightly television news program on CBS.

"So far as I know, this distinction was earned entirely by straightening my tie and putting on a jacket just before the TV camera turns on every night," Cronkite said Tuesday in a daily essay on CBS Radio.

Cronkite said the citation from the Fashion Foundation of America credited him with banishing the "baggy-tweed reporter concept," but he protested: "What they don't know , of course, is that my unseen pants still fall in that category.

Street-Scene

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A couple attracted little attention as they were wed in a street corner ceremony so a good friend could be present.

The friend is Charles Wright, crippled peanut vendor who felt he couldn't afford to leave his business for more than a few minutes.

So, Gladys W. Branson and Paul E. Burris arranged to be married Tuesday at the business site. A reception was held at a nearby lunchroom after the noon ceremony.

Adolfo's Premise: Fun Looks But Good

NEW YORK (AP) — Fashions may have grown up and become serious but designer Adolfo is still kidding around.

Yet he manages to have some fun—mostly without being gooey and tacky and wrong. This is hard to do now, when women are waiting to attack the first designer who starts getting funny again.

Take a look at Adolfo's name, spelled out in rows of block letters, marching across the front of a dress A-D-O-L-F-O, like a team sweater. You think, he's got to be joking. He was.

"I thought it would be a gag, but it was taken seriously, and it's sold," Adolfo says happily, explaining that his customers are "spirited."

"It's never serious, this way of dressing," says Adolfo, whose prices are serious: $225 to $1,000.

Adolfo concentrates on some fairly safe shapes: straight pants, shirt tail jackets and pleated skirts.

And he tries some bolder ones. His ankle-length petal skirts are topped by large hats with roll back brims. He offers dresses with one bare shoulder.

"It's a sharp way to look sharp in definition," Adolfo says of this one-shoulder idea.

Pre-Show Jitters

New York, N.Y. — I'm terrified of failing," Ann-Margaret confides in a Pageant Magazine exclusive in the current issue. "I always get scared before I sing -- sometimes I vomit."

Ann-Margret grew up in an atmosphere of poverty she was determined to get away from. "If I'm ambitious that is the reason," she explains in the interview. "My early life was not all that pleasant. I wanted out from it, and I didn't care how hard I had to work."

The Swedish-born entertainer was homesick and lonely when she first came to America at the age of eight. "I decided then and there I would be an entertainer," she tells Pageant. "I wanted to make people laugh. As early as I can remember, all I thought about was bringing people happiness."

When she came to Hollywood, Ann-Margaret continues, she was taken advantage of. "I was so young and vulnerable," she admits. "I trusted the wrong people and they hurt me. I was depressed a lot of the time before I knew Roger. I'm still moody -- still shy -- I'm terribly nervous. I shake a lot. But now with Roger handling everything I shake much less than I used to, and that's a big relief."

Marrying Roger Smith, Ann-Margret feels, was the smartest thing she ever did. "I fell in love with him because I could tell he would watch out for me," she concludes in Pageant. "He is strong and sure of himself in every situation. He never loses his cool. He has complete control over me, and that's the way we want it. I'm a dependent non-aggressive woman, and I like being told what to do."

Do you really want your brother-in-law to know how much you earned last year?

Of course not. It's nobody's business but your own.

However, annually millions of taxpayers bear this kind of personal information to people who really shouldn't know. For what? Just so they can save a few dollars doing their income tax.

That's some price to pay.

You see, for only a few dollars more than it costs to do it with any amateur who might not know that work clothes in some instances are deductible, or that income averaging might save tax dollars, you can have your tax return done by a specially trained member of the H & R Block team with complete confidentiality. There are thousands of them in over 6,000 conveniently located offices. H & R Block's fees start at $5 and the average cost was under $12.50 for the 7 million families we served last year.

Furthermore, if your return is audited we will accompany you, at no extra cost, to the Internal Revenue Service and explain how your return was prepared even though we will not act as your legal representative.

This means the H & R Block ready to offer you year 'round tax service for just a low fee a year, with no extra charge for audits and estimates. Yes, we cost a little more than your relatives or friends or neighbors but when you think of what we deliver you can't afford anything less than H & R Block.

Durham-Lane

MEMPHIS, Tenn. - The chapel of St. Luke's United Methodist church in Memphis was the setting Dec. 22 for the wedding of Margaret Elizabeth "Beth" Lane and Charles Patrick Durham.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lee Lane of Memphis. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Herbert Durham of Memphis.

Dr. Lloyd Ramer officiated at the ceremony. Music was by Mrs. Carlton Wilkes, organist, and Valerie Gamble and Gail Davis, vocalists.

The bride was given away by her father. She wore a gown of white satin and lace with sleeves gathered into buttoned cuffs, a fitted bodice and full midi-length skirt. A satin and lace cap held a shoulder- length veil with cascading organza bells. She carried red roses and her mothers bible.

Mrs. Harold Lee Lane, Jr. of Columbia, S.C. was her sister-in-laws only attendant.

Frank Burt of Memphis was best man. Ushers were John Durham, the bridegrooms brother and Hal Lane, Jr. of Columbia, S.C., the brides brother.

Serving at the church reception following the ceremony were Paulette Tomlinson, Shirley Jones, Ellyn Ball and Mrs. Ken Crill, all of Memphis.

Among those attending the wedding were the brides grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Kirk of Sikeston, Mo. and Mr. and Mrs. J.J. McSally of Fredericktown, Mo.

The couple is living at 1304 Court, Memphis.

Mountaintop Wedding

BOISE, Idaho (AP) - The bride didn't walk down the aisle at this wedding. In fact, neither did the groom, best man, matron of honor nor the 30 guests in attendance.

They all rode a chair lift.

Lee Grimes married Diane Seears on New Year's Eve atop a foggy mountain at the Bogus Basin Ski Resort near Boise.

"It has never been done before," explained the groom.

"We wanted to be closer to God," said the bride.

All but one of the wedding party skied back down the mountain after the Boise couple exchanged marriage vows.

The new Mrs. Grimes opted for a toboggan. She doesn't know how to ski.

Crash Survivor Only One Of 92

LIMA, Peru AP - A 17-year-old girl survived an airliner crash in the Peruvian Jungle on Christmas Eve, wandered for days in the tropical rain forest, swam across flodded areas and waded through swamps, then built a raft that carried her to a wood cutters's camp.

Juliane Koepcke, the daughter of two noted German-born ornithologists, was brought to the jungle colony of Tourna-vista Tuesday by two wood-cutters who found her semi-conscious, floating down the Pachitea River aboard the log and vine raft. From here she was flown to a U.S. missionary center at Pucallpa, 500 miles northeast of Lima, and reunited with her father.

Her mother is missing in the crash.

Juliane's father, Dr. Hans Koepcke, and her mother had lived in Peru for more than 20 years and were the leading authorities on Peruvian birds.

The girl was reported suffering from hungar, but she seemed to be in fair shape. She had made many trips in the jungle with her parents, and the couple she lived with while attending high school in Lima.

So far she is the only survivor of 92 persons who were aboard an Electra turboprop that crashed 12 days ago on a flight from Lima to Pucallpa and Iquitos. Aerial and ground searchers redoubled their efforts today, seeking the wreck-age but officials said there was no indication the girl saw any other survivors.

The plane was operated by a Peruvian airline, Lineas Aereas Nacionales, and five U.S. citizens from the missionary center at Pucallpa were among the passengers.

Amanda de Pina, a nurse at a medical post in Tournavista, said Juliane had only a partial memory of the crash andher harrowing 10-day trek through the jungle. She remembered looking out the window and seeing an engine afire, then the airliner lurched and she suddenly found herself flying through the air.

The next thing the girl remembered, the nurse said, was waking up amid the wreckage, still strapped to her seat and covered by the bodies of three or four other passengers.

Freeing herself from the seat and bodies, the terrified girl ran from the scene, stopping only to pick up a Christmas cake which she had been bringing to her father.

Suffering from a number of cuts, the girl walked for several days following a stream, sometimes swinning across flooded areas and wading through swamps.

The cake lasted three days. After that Juliane ate nothing, the nurse said.

Finally she arrived at the Pachitea River, a tributary of the Amazon. There the young survivor built a crude raft of logs tied together with vines and launched it into the current.

It was not immediately known how many days Juliane spent aboard the raft, but the woodcutters- Amado Pereyra and Marcio Ribera-reported that she was scarcely able to identify herself when she reached their camp Monday.

Cronkite Comments

NEW YORK AP - Walter Cronkite says the fashion promoters who voted him one of the nation's best dressed men didn't know about the pants he wears as anchor man for his nightly television news program on CBS.

"So far as I know, this distinction was earned entirely by straightening my tie and putting on a jacket just before the TV camera turns on every night," Cronkite said Tuesday in a daily essay on CBS Radio.

Cronkite said the citation from the Fashion Foundation of America credited him with banishing the "baggy-tweed reporter concept," but he protested: "What they don't know , of course, is that my unseen pants still fall in that category.

Street-Scene

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A couple attracted little attention as they were wed in a street corner ceremony so a good friend could be present.

The friend is Charles Wright, crippled peanut vendor who felt he couldn't afford to leave his business for more than a few minutes.

So, Gladys W. Branson and Paul E. Burris arranged to be married Tuesday at the business site. A reception was held at a nearby lunchroom after the noon ceremony.

Adolfo's Premise: Fun Looks But Good

NEW YORK (AP) — Fashions may have grown up and become serious but designer Adolfo is still kidding around.

Yet he manages to have some fun—mostly without being gooey and tacky and wrong. This is hard to do now, when women are waiting to attack the first designer who starts getting funny again.

Take a look at Adolfo's name, spelled out in rows of block letters, marching across the front of a dress A-D-O-L-F-O, like a team sweater. You think, he's got to be joking. He was.

"I thought it would be a gag, but it was taken seriously, and it's sold," Adolfo says happily, explaining that his customers are "spirited."

"It's never serious, this way of dressing," says Adolfo, whose prices are serious: $225 to $1,000.

Adolfo concentrates on some fairly safe shapes: straight pants, shirt tail jackets and pleated skirts.

And he tries some bolder ones. His ankle-length petal skirts are topped by large hats with roll back brims. He offers dresses with one bare shoulder.

"It's a sharp way to look sharp in definition," Adolfo says of this one-shoulder idea.

He's not kidding about his body-hugging crochets and knits, seen through this spring collection.

Pat In Ghana

By FRANCES LEWINE

ACCRA, Ghana AP - Pat Nixon arrived in Ghana's capital today for the second stop on her three-nation West African tour.

The U.S. First Lady flew to Accra from Monrovia, Liberia, where she led the U.S. delegation to the inauguration of President William R. Tolbert.

Tolbert said goodbye to her at a white tie banquet for 396 guests.

Mrs. Nixon will stay in Ghana two days, going Friday to Abidjan, capital of the Ivory Coast.

Mrs. Nixon wore her new green-sashed Liberian decoration on a yellow lace evening dress for the farewell party Tuesday night. And Tolbert presented the Grand Band of the Star of Africa to evangelist Billy Graham who had borrowed that decoration from Tolbert's brother to wear to the inaugural ball Monday night as a substitute for another Liberian decoration he had left at home.

The three-day inaugural festivities concluded with fireworks lighting the sky of the ocean-front capital.

A high spot of Mrs. Nixon's last day in Liberia was a colorful special performance of tribal dancing, singing and drumming presented on a fifth floor terrance of the executive mansion and office building.

The women ended the show by dressing up Mrs. Nixon in their native costume, including a large head scarf. She pirouetted and modeled it before them and warmly shook hands all around as they made an approving clatter with drums and rattles.

Ann Landers

Kudos To Ann From Al-Anon

Dear Ann Landers: A few years ago my husband and I were running a mail-order pornography business. At the time, I thought nothing of posing for nude pictures and acting in stag movies. These pictures and movies were sold to customers all over the United States.

We are no longer in the business and I am very ashamed of my past. It's difficult now for me to understand how I could have been so foolish. The point is -- I am worried sick that someone somewhere will recognize me. Every time we attend a social function or meet new friends, I'm a wreck. Is there any way I can rid myself of this terrible fear? ---Miserable In Missouri

Dear M.in M.: Time is your greatest ally. Chances are that it has already covered your tracks. My advice is, change the color of your hair (if you haven't already done so) --and keep your clothes on, Lady.

Dear Ann Landers: Last August you published an enthusiastic and grateful letter from a woman who learned about Al-Anon through your column. Within one month we received nearly, 10,000 letters as a direct result of that one mention.

The timing was nothing less than miraculous. Had it occurred before our recent move, we'd have been paralyzed by the lack of space. As it is, there is scarcely a place which is not occupied by staff or volunteers sorting the letters by states, cities, and towns, thanks to you.

Volunteers have responded nobly. Without them, heaven knows how this beautiful crisis could have been met. There will be no way to get an exact count of how many new members will join Al-Anon as a result of that single letter in your column. There is little doubt that Al-Anon has no more effective and enthusiastic friend in all the world than Ann Landers. Long may she live and write her spirited columns! ---The Staff

Dear Staff: Thanks for those kind words. Now, get ready for more mail.

For all you readers out there who are living with an alcoholic, I urge you to write to the National Headquarters of this splendid organization, Al-Anon. You might also learn how to help him or her win the battle of the bottle. The address is Al-Anon Family Group Headquarters, Inc., Dept. B, P.O. Box 182, Madison Square Sation, New York, New York 10010. Write for a free booklet. And Please enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Postage can run into money. Take it from someone who knows.

Dear Ann Landers: Please settle a serious difficult of opinion in our family. You don't need to go into any long scientific explanations, just a yes or no will be sufficient. The questions are as follows.

(1) Can two adults with straight hair produce a child with tight ringlets?

(2) Can two adults with very light blonde hair produce a childe whose hair is dark brown.

Everything I have read indicates that the answer to both these questions is NO. What do you say? -- Facts Wanted

Dear F.W.: I don't know what you have been reading but the answer to both questions is yes.

Confidential to Finders Keepers: Sorry, I don't think much of your "logic." The rest of the saying is ---"Losers Weepers." Do you want to be responsible for all those tears?

Meadow Lane G.C. Activities

The Meadow Lane Garden Club held its December meeting at the home of Mrs. Morris French.

Amidst Christmas decorations, officers for 1972 were installed by Mrs. Virginia Weideman. They were Mrs. L.A. Schurenberg, president; Mrs. P.J. Schlosser, vice president; Mrs. V.A. Hubbard, secretary; Mrs. Buford Baber, treasurer; and Mrs. John Strinich, second vice president.

Contributions were made by members to present gifts of toys to patients at the Regional Diagnostic Clinic.

In another meeting on Jan. 3 at the First National Bank community room, members elected to buy a plant for their club-sponsored patio at Missouri Delta Community hospital.

Plans are being made by the club to sponsor a flower show in the fall.

EMPHATICALLY A SERIOUS CANDIDATE, she says, Brooklyn Congresswoman Shirley Chrisholm is considering Democratic presidential primary races in Florida, North Carolina, California, New York, Maryland and the District of Columbia.

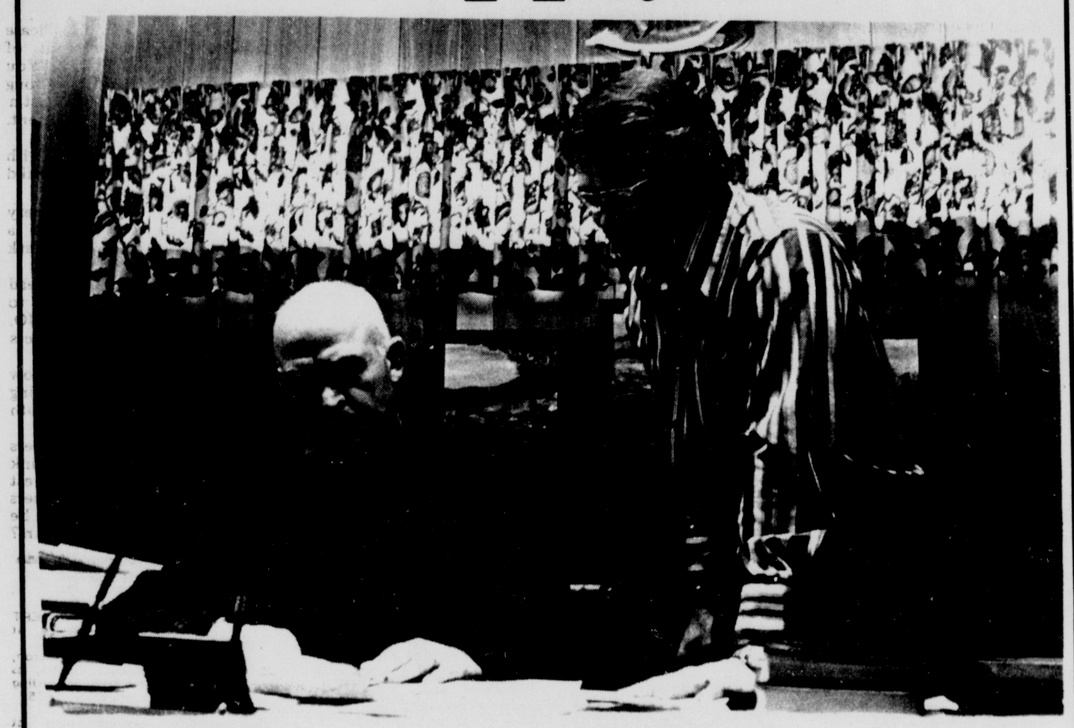
Praise For A "Good Town"

Story Of Steward Steel Supply Co.



Fred Steward Sr. explains a purchase order for fabricated steel to his son,Fred Steward Jr.,president of Steward Steel Supply Co.

By JUDY STROUP

He came to this town in 1950 with a briefcase in his hand. And he established what is now the largest steel fabricating business between St. Louis and Memphis.

Fred Steward Sr., chairman of the board of Steward Steel Supply Co., Hwy. 62 East, stayed at the old Homestead Motel, where the Midtowner Motel is now.

"The second night here I got so blue that I wrote to my former employer in St. Louis and asked for my job back," Steward said.

"I haven't had another moment like that since then."

Steward, formerly from the St. Louis suburb of Normandy, was born on a farm in Wayne County, three miles from Loundes.

He worked at the Chevrolet plant in St. Louis in the summer, and the post office at nights, and earned enough to pay his way through Washington University.

Steward said he once rose at 3 a.m. to walk a mile and a half to a woman's house, where he washed her car, swept the porch, and polished the door handles for 30 cents an hour.

"I couldn't even come home for Christmas because I had to work," Steward said.

Steward received a degree in engineering from the university.

"We started our business in a little 30 foot by 30 foot building one block west of here. I did my own selling, engineering, detailing, bookkeeping and everything. I had one employe," he said.

Since then, the firm has increased its plant size with six additions that total more than 19,000 square feet. It now employs 25 persons.

"And the bigger it gets the more problems you have," Steward said.

The firm buys beams,channels, angles and plates of steel directly from the mills in Chicago, and ships them by rail to Sikeston.

"Then we weld, punch holes, and paint the steel according to the architect's specifications to fit into a given building," Steward explained.

Usually, steel is transported from the mill to the warehouse where it is purchased by the retail consumer. But Steward Steel Supply is both a warehouse and a retail outlet for this area.

"Eight years ago we started with a new product line," Steward said, "finished hardware and hollow metal."

Finished hardware includes door knobs, hinges and facings, and hollow metal is thin gauge metal formed into a certain shape.

"Hollow metal usually has glass in it," Steward continued.

The two categories constitute 40 percent of the firm's business. It also carries in its inventory steel joists, decks, overhead doors, reinforcing, wire mesh, office partitions and bolts.

Since steel is shipped by rail from the mill, the firm needed a rail siding.

"We needed more room, too, so we went out and bought 12 acres of land east of Miner for our second plant. It handles heavy structrual steel, like the beams for the New Madrid R-1 Vocational Skills Center."

Those beams weigh 7500 pounds each. Lighter fabrication is done at the plant in town.

When he hasn't been busy running his business, Steward has been busy in church and community affairs.

Formerly president of the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce, Steward was also a director of the state Chamber of Chomerce.

He was chairman of the First Baptist Church building committee.

"I teach a Sunday School class now. But my real love is for the farm life," he said slowly.

Steward recently bought the farm where he spent his childhood, and he estimates he spends 30 per cent of his time there.

"I hope to phase out my responsibilities here within the next year or two and devote more time to my farm in the hills where I raise cattle," Steward said.

"I have vast woods that are enchanting. It's 55 miles from town and you are out by yourself," he continued.

Steward said he has camped out about 200 nights in the past 20 years, mostly to fish with a buddy on rivers in Missouri and Arkansas.

"I think I can attribute our success to three things," Steward added, "good and faithful employes, the blessings of Almighty God, and living in a good town."

"Family First," Says Janet Leigh

New York, N.Y. — "My family has always come first with me and my career second," Janet Leigh states in Photoplay Magazine. "I never work on the weekends; I won't work out of the country; I don't do as many films as I'm offered and I've turned down two plays. I truly enjoy my family."

If Janet were to give up her career, however, she would feel unbalanced as a woman. "Had I not been exposed to the acting profession before getting married, then I might have been content with just marriage and a family," she explains in the exclusive interview. "My career, however, has given me great pleasure and fulfillment. It is 'my thing'. I love my work and I love performing. I'm lucky enough, and grateful, that I have both a happy home life and a career. If a woman really tries, the two can be combined successfully."

She is not sure, though, whether a woman can be completely fulfilled by only a career. "Often a so-called career girl may just be fooling herself into believing she's completely fulfilled – until the right man comes along," Janet points out in Photoplay. "But I don't think that having a life dedicated solely to a career necessarily makes a woman unfeminine. Femininity comes from within oneself."

POLLY'S POINTERS

Letter Opener Helpful To Hospital Patient

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—Having just returned home from the hospital I have a suggestion for anyone planning such a trip. Few of us ever think of including a letter opener with the things we take along. One is so helpful for opening cards and other mail which can be quite a task for a weak person. Mine was even loaned to other ladies who could not open their mail.—MRS. L. M. M.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—Our new breadbox has a magnetic catch but it has lost its oomph, so the box will not stay closed. Can someone tell me how to rejuvenate this catch?—TERRY

DEAR POLLY—My Pet Peeve is with the manufacturers of complete spaghetti dinners who put in a huge amount of spaghetti (after it is cooked) and a very small can of meat sauce. There is never enough to really cover the spaghetti for a good taste. I would rather pay a bit more and get a COMPLETE dinner. The sauce is delicious if there was just more of it.—MRS. R. C. H.

DEAR POLLY—I want to tell Lois that I put a small piece of moleskin on each of the four corners of my plastic table mats so they do not slide on the table and this works fine. I have also used it on the bottoms of the legs of chairs and have no marks on hardwood floors when a chair is moved.—G. S.

DEAR POLLY—Lois can keep her plastic table mats from slipping around on the table by using some liquid rubber on the backs at the corners or around the edges. This can also be used on footstools that slide around. Rug backing can also be applied but is more expensive than the liquid rubber which comes in a tube.—LOUISE

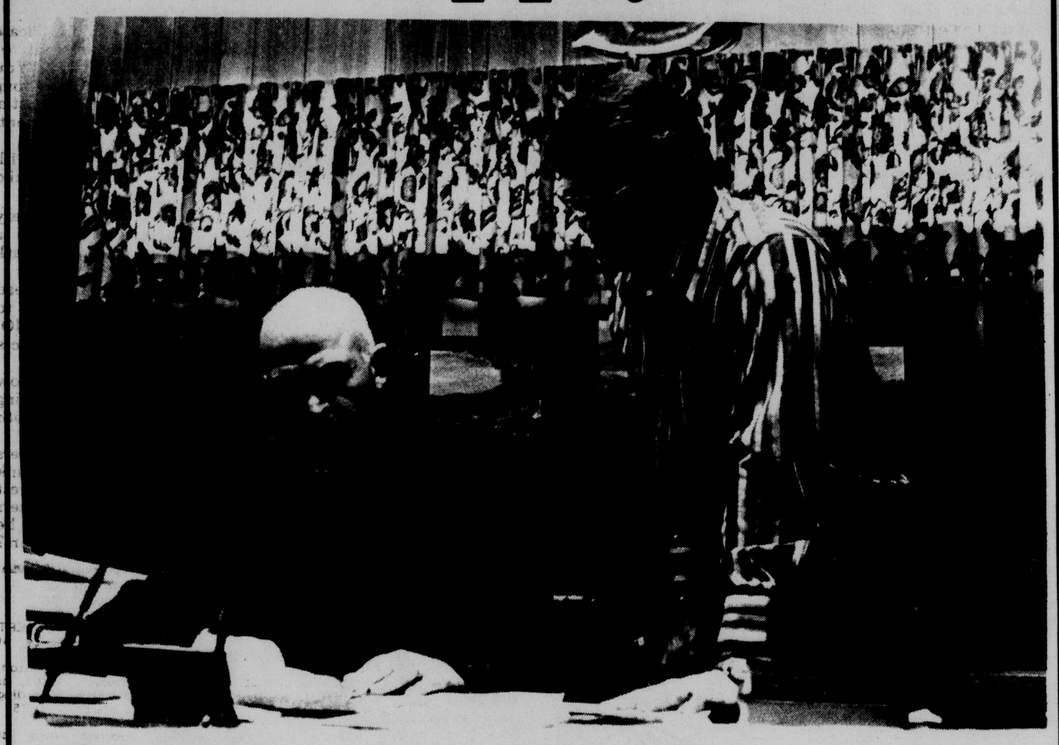
Story Of Steward Steel Supply Co.



Fred Steward Sr. explains a purchase order for fabricated steel to his son,Fred Steward Jr.,president of Steward Steel Supply Co.

By JUDY STROUP

He came to this town in 1950 with a briefcase in his hand. And he established what is now the largest steel fabricating business between St. Louis and Memphis.

Fred Steward Sr., chairman of the board of Steward Steel Supply Co., Hwy. 62 East, stayed at the old Homestead Motel, where the Midtowner Motel is now.

"The second night here I got so blue that I wrote to my former employer in St. Louis and asked for my job back," Steward said.

"I haven't had another moment like that since then."

Steward, formerly from the St. Louis suburb of Normandy, was born on a farm in Wayne County, three miles from Loundes.

He worked at the Chevrolet plant in St. Louis in the summer, and the post office at nights, and earned enough to pay his way through Washington University.

Steward said he once rose at 3 a.m. to walk a mile and a half to a woman's house, where he washed her car, swept the porch, and polished the door handles for 30 cents an hour.

"I couldn't even come home for Christmas because I had to work," Steward said.

Steward received a degree in engineering from the university.

"We started our business in a little 30 foot by 30 foot building one block west of here. I did my own selling, engineering, detailing, bookkeeping and everything. I had one employe," he said.

Since then, the firm has increased its plant size with six additions that total more than 19,000 square feet. It now employs 25 persons.

"And the bigger it gets the more problems you have," Steward said.

The firm buys beams,channels, angles and plates of steel directly from the mills in Chicago, and ships them by rail to Sikeston.

"Then we weld, punch holes, and paint the steel according to the architect's specifications to fit into a given building," Steward explained.

Usually, steel is transported from the mill to the warehouse where it is purchased by the retail consumer. But Steward Steel Supply is both a warehouse and a retail outlet for this area.

"Eight years ago we started with a new product line," Steward said, "finished hardware and hollow metal."

Finished hardware includes door knobs, hinges and facings, and hollow metal is thin gauge metal formed into a certain shape.

"Hollow metal usually has glass in it," Steward continued.

The two categories constitute 40 percent of the firm's business. It also carries in its inventory steel joists, decks, overhead doors, reinforcing, wire mesh, office partitions and bolts.

Since steel is shipped by rail from the mill, the firm needed a rail siding.

"We needed more room, too, so we went out and bought 12 acres of land east of Miner for our second plant. It handles heavy structrual steel, like the beams for the New Madrid R-1 Vocational Skills Center."

Those beams weigh 7500 pounds each. Lighter fabrication is done at the plant in town.

When he hasn't been busy running his business, Steward has been busy in church and community affairs.

Formerly president of the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce, Steward was also a director of the state Chamber of Chomerce.

He was chairman of the First Baptist Church building committee.

"I teach a Sunday School class now. But my real love is for the farm life," he said slowly.

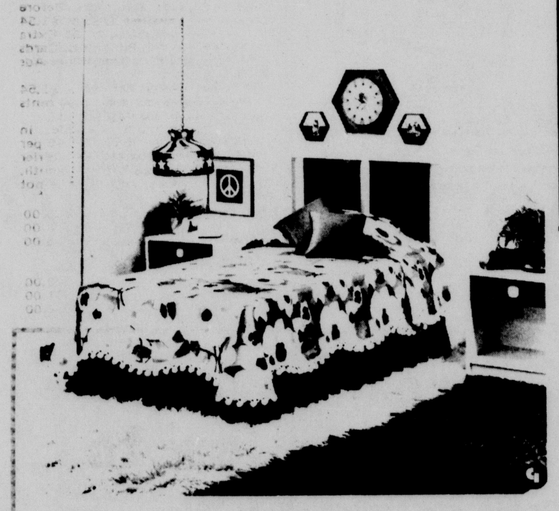
Steward recently bought the farm where he spent his childhood, and he estimates he spends 30 per cent of his time there.

"I hope to phase out my responsibilities here within the next year or two and devote more time to my farm in the hills where I raise cattle," Steward said.

"I have vast woods that are enchanting. It's 55 miles from town and you are out by yourself," he continued.

Steward said he has camped out about 200 nights in the past 20 years, mostly to fish with a buddy on rivers in Missouri and Arkansas.

"I think I can attribute our success to three things," Steward added, "good and faithful employes, the blessings of Almighty God, and living in a good town."



FLOWER POWER—A sure-fire brightener for a teen-age room is this bedspread of easy-care cotton duck printed with bold overscaled flowers in red, white, and blue. Underscored by a fire engine red shag rug and accent pieces, the room swings with color. By Desley Fabrics, the spread also comes with a variety of coordinates including quilted throws, tablecloth, cafe curtains, and valances.

The magnificent rich, green color which gives unusual qualities to the emerald is due to chromium.

"Family First," Says Janet Leigh

New York, N.Y. — "My family has always come first with me and my career second," Janet Leigh states in Photoplay Magazine. "I never work on the weekends; I won't work out of the country; I don't do as many films as I'm offered and I've turned down two plays. I truly enjoy my family."

If Janet were to give up her career, however, she would feel unbalanced as a woman. "Had I not been exposed to the acting profession before getting married, then I might have been content with just marriage and a family," she explains in the exclusive interview. "My career, however, has given me great pleasure and fulfillment. It is 'my thing'. I love my work and I love performing. I'm lucky enough, and grateful, that I have both a happy home life and a career. If a woman really tries, the two can be combined successfully."

She is not sure, though, whether a woman can be completely fulfilled by only a career. "Often a so-called career girl may just be fooling herself into believing she's completely fulfilled – until the right man comes along," Janet points out in Photoplay. "But I don't think that having a life dedicated solely to a career necessarily makes a woman unfeminine. Femininity comes from within oneself."

Science In Your Life

Research is usually associated with graduate students. Undergraduate students are assumed to be frivolous and irresponsible.

A fresh note has been added with the announcement by seven UMC College of Agriculture undergraduates that they want to do research, too. They have submitted a project outline to Dean Homer Folks, requesting a small amount of research funds.

These students want to study the possibility of mixing whey from cheese plants with various types of waste paper to make livestock feed. They will be working with Dr. John R. Campbell who, you may remember, was mentioned in an earlier column for proving that cows could produce milk while on a diet of waste paper.

The advantage to the student proposal, they point out, is that the cellulose in the waste paper would be supplemented with protein from the whey. They believe that this would make excellent livestock feed, and they plan to test it.

How important could this project be? Waste paper in the United States exceeds 20 million tons annually. And it is reported that one typical cheese plant in the Kansas City area is dumping 1,000 pounds of whey into the Missouri River every day.

But that.s not all. In addition to cleaning up the environment, use of these waste materials for feed could free valuable grain for use as food.

Your little friend, the field mouse, has been drafted into the battle against hunger. It's a matter of economy. Such tiny animals weigh only two ounces as adults and don't require nearly as much food as rats or guinea pigs.

This is very important when a plant breeder has only a small amount of seed available for a nutrition study, says crop scientist Fred C. Elliott of Michigan State University. He knows that if the field mice grow well it will be worthwhile increasing the food materials that are being tested on them. If the mice do not gain weight, the new material probably would not be worthy of the expenditure of more research funds.

One of physicist Niels Bohr's students once noticed a horseshoe hanging outside the famous scientist's door and showed surprise that Professor Bohr could be superstitious. "I'm not superstitious," came the answer, "That.s just for good luck."

Agricultural chemists at the University of Missouri - Columbia have put to rest one fear that has been worrying doctors and others who are concerned with hemophilia and its related diseases.

Recent research at other institutions had suggested that a deficiency of a blood constituent known as platelet favtor 3 has contributed to the human bleeding disorders that are similar to those found in bleeder swine.

The University of Missouri has the world's only herd of hemophiliac swine. Dr. C. N. Cornell and colleagues set about to check this report. After a number of tests they have reported to the medical world that a lack of platelet factor 3 "is not a characteristic of the inherited bleeding disease in swine."

Although the platelet factor 3 deficiency has been reported in some human patients afflicted with bleeder diseases, it now is apparent that it is not a cause of the difficulty.

Much of the criticism you hear about pesticides in our environment springs from damage and pollution caused when pesticide sprays drift into areas where they are not wanted, USDA researchers at the Corn Borer Research Laboratory, Ankeny, Iowa, are making tests with pesticides suspended in foam instead of the usual liquids.

They find that the pesticide - spiked foam finds its way into whorls and leaf axils where insects are likely to hide or lay eggs. Nearly all the insecticide stays othe plants, thereby reducing soil and air contamination. And the cost is reduced because practically all of the insecticide hits the target.

Half a loaf is better than working all day.

Lisbon Falls, Maine

A truly terrible situation has just been most happily averted, but it was a splendid idea, and might have worked. I shudder to think of the tangled consequences if it had; the whole governmental structure of the United States of America could have collapsed in utter frustration, with international overtones, because Henri Delorme is a Canadian. Indeed, this newspaper was party to the complicity, because it was here that I told how Henri considered buying the oil painting of "The Battle of Lake Erie."

If you weren't paying attention, Henri came down from Canada to Maine over Dominion Day, and while here attended an auction of antiques. As he approached, a bidder offered thirty - eight - fifty for the painting, and Henri thought it was something he'd like to have. Just as he was about to call out, "Forty Dollars!" a voice to one side shouted, "Four thousand!"

Besides being a prominent Canadian broadcasting official, Henri is Past Grand Exalted Ruler of the Elks of Canada, a preferment that took him, during his term, into every cranny of his country. Few United Statesers, I think, realize how considerable is Canada, and how numerous are its Elks. I mean, Henri is not unknown. So when the anecdont appeared in this column, everybody sent Henri a clipping.

The notoriety was not displeasing to him, and he meditated on some way to exhibit this thanks to me. So on the 18th of September les Expos entertained les Cardinals de St. Louis for a jeu de baseball, gaining a victoire. This means that we crossed the international frontier at Coburn Gore, Maine, and were in Sherbrooke, where Henri lives. A gore is a triangular plot of land left over after the surveyors have straightened a map. So as we set out for home, Mr. Delorme set up his most infamous desing on the constitutional sanity of our great Republic. He gave me, as a farewell gift, a box. A wooden Box, cube shaped, exactly 12 inches on a side. A handsome box, finished in grained pastel. A secure box, with hinged cover and padlocked hasp. "We have mailed you the key," called Henri as we drove away, "so you can open it when you get home!"

"Au revoir, bon boyage!" he added, laughing rather over much.

"A bientot!"

In due time we arrived at the border inspection station at Coburn Gore. "Good morning, are you citizens of the United States, do you have anything to declare, how long have you been in Canada, no fireworks, firearms or ammunition, would you please let me look in the rear, thank you, that's all."

We came home.

Thus did the great jest of Henri, which could have toppled us all, come to naught. You see, even though he really did mail the key to the padlock, the box was made so it cannot be opened. Using epjay, he sealed each joint and corner, blind fastening many screws and nails. The hinges, artfully set in, are fakes. The padlock will unlock, but that's all the good that does. Henri, as we sped homeward, smiled and smiled as, in his mind's eye, he could see the border inspector as he peered into our luggage and said, "Would you open this box, please?"

Can we possibly imagine how things would have trended if that had happened?

"I'm heartbroken, but I cannot do so."

"You refuse to open the box for inspection?"

"Not exactly; I am trying to explain that it does not open."

"You do not have the key?"

"Yes, but not with me, and besides — I am desolate!"

"What's in the box?"

"Nothing."

"I must warn you that anything you say will be held against you, and you may have one telephone call."

The simple indictment of a citizen for a border indiscretion is nothing compared to what this would have meant to the higher levels of our Republic. Washington, of course, would be notified.

"What do we do about an empty box that can't be opened?"

"With a what did you say?"

How would the Treasury Department turn this over to the FBI for investigation, and how would the Justice Department proceed with the evidence? How, finally, would the Supreme Court entertain the appeal? Would they, as when they are stumped and don't know the answers, refuse on jurisdictional grounds?

Science In Your Life

Research is usually associated with graduate students. Undergraduate students are assumed to be frivolous and irresponsible.

A fresh note has been added with the announcement by seven UMC College of Agriculture undergraduates that they want to do research, too. They have submitted a project outline to Dean Homer Folks, requesting a small amount of research funds.

These students want to study the possibility of mixing whey from cheese plants with various types of waste paper to make livestock feed. They will be working with Dr. John R. Campbell who, you may remember, was mentioned in an earlier column for proving that cows could produce milk while on a diet of waste paper.

The advantage to the student proposal, they point out, is that the cellose in the waste paper would be supplemented with protein from the whey. They believe that this would make excellent livestock feed, and they plan to test it.

How important could this project be? Waste paper in the United States exceeds 20 million tons annually. And it is reported that one typical cheese plant in the Kansas City area is dumping 1,000 pounds of whey ino the Missouri River every day.

But that.s not all. In addition to cleaning up the environment, use of these waste materials for feed could free valuable grain for use as food.

Your little friend, the field mouse, has been drafted into the battle against hunger. It's a matter of economy. Such tiny animals weigh only two ounces as adults and don't require nearly as much food as rats or guinea pigs.

This is very important when a plant breeder has only a small amount of seed available for a nutrition study, says crop scientist Fred C. Elliott of Michigan State University. He knows that if the field mice grow well it will be worthwhile increaseing the food materials that are being tested on them. If the mice do not gain weight, the new material probably would not be worthy of the expenditure of more research funds.

One of physicist Niels Bohr's students once noticed a horseshoe hanging outside the famous scientist's door and showed surprise that Professor Bohr could be superstitious. "I'm not superstitious," came the answer. "That.s just for good luck."

Agricultural chemists at the University of Missouri - Columbia have put to rest one fear that was worrying doctors and others who are concerned with hemophilia and its related diseases.

Recent research at other institutions had suggested that a deficiency of a blood constituent known as platelet favtor 3 has contributed to the human bleeding disorders that are similar to those found in bleeder swine.

The University of Missouri has the world's only herd of hemophiliac swine. Dr. C. N. Cornell and colleagues set about to check this report. After a number of tests they have reported to the medical world that a lack of platelet factor 3 "is not a characteristic of the inherited bleeding disease in swine."

Although the platelet factor 3 deficiency has been reported in some human patients afflicted with bleeder diseases, it now is apparent that it is not a cause of the difficulty.

Much of the criticism you hear about pesticides in our environment springs from damage and pollution caused when pesticide sprays drift into areas where they are not wanted, USDA researchers at the Corn Borer Research Laboratory, Ankeny, Iowa, are making tests with pesticides suspended in foam instead of the usual liquids.

They find that the pesticide - spiked foam finds its way into whorls and leaf axils where insects are likely to hide or lay eggs. Nearly all the insecticide stays othe plants, thereby reducing soil and air contamination. And the cost is reduced because practically all of the insecticide hits the target.

Pros Plod, Amateurs Sleep

WASHINGTON — On the surface, the political atmosphere here seems flat and dull, but under the surface there is quite a lot of exciting activity, which could be important and even decisive in the presidential voting next November.

It is in these quiet periods, even before the presidential primary elections, when the hard work of organization and registration is done, and if you watch the back pages of the newspapers, you will see considerable evidence of this careful preliminary foundation building.

Almost without notice, for example, the legislatures in most of the large states have been passing bills to permit the 11 million newly enfranchised 18-to-21 -year -olds to vote next November on campus, rather than at the place of their parents' residence. This could make a difference of several million votes, and in a few key states, could tip the balance to one party or the other.

Also, there is a move on here in the Democratic - controlled Congress to pass legislation that would enable voters to register by mail, and this, too, would undoubtedly increase the size of the vote substantially and probably favor the Democratic presidential nominee.

Much will depend, too, on the outcome of the current battle on Capitol Hill over campaign spending reform. The present system, by general agreement, is not only a scandal but a disgrace.

What is going on in these rather dull, scattered and technical debates over election spending and registration is really the critical strategic battle of the campaign. These things are going to set the stage for the big drama later on. They are going to decide who the votes, for one thing, which is not incidental in an election, and who has money for television, which in the frenzy next October may be critical.

And the interesting paradox at the moment is that even the young people with the most education on the intricate American federal and electoral system, and with the most energy and the loudest grievances, are not really very active sin these preliminary battles. Some of them are, of course, but most of them are "waiting for the election," though what is going on right now in these seemingly dreary nuts and bolts debates could actually decide the election.

The election is flat and dull on the surface precisely because the candidates aree working underground on the substructure of the campaign. They are not polishing sentences, but organizing teams and gathering funds. That is what this phase of a presidential election campaign is all about, and it is far too important to be left merely to the candidates and their staffs, and the organized lobbies.

Labor's political acitivity these days illustrates the point. George Meany, the president of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, is very active on the propaganda front.

But big labor is too experienced to stop there. Underneath all George Meany's hawkish and protectionist arguments, and his demands for more money for the workers, his director of the AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education, Alexander E. Barkan, is concentrating on showing labor leaders all over the country how to get their places in the Democratic presidential nominating convention next summer, under the new rules of that convention.

The White House and the Republican National Committee are doing the same thing. They are raising funds. They are quietyly blocking legislation for campaign expenditure reform, while seeming to support it, and trying to limit the registration of the new young voters.

The new rising enfranchised generation has immense potential political power.

Television Escape Cut Off For Viewers

NEW YORK (AP) -- There comes an occasional night when, despite the work -a-day viewer's yearning to shuck real - life problems for the fantasy world of a favorite television action show, escape is cut off.

Tuesday night was one of them. "Mod Squad," usually a reliable escape hatch, started by having Pete Cochran get a brain concussion, and for the rest of the hour he was staggering around trying to solve a case, gasping for breath and with cloudy vision. It was just too painful for relaxed viewing and besides, heavy breathing and staggering becomes boring and irksome after a few minutes.

A bit later, "Marcus Welby, M.D." came along with a clinical treatment on German measles, mildly diluted by a story line. It explored in detail the danger to unborn children when the mothers suffer from the disease during pregnancy.

Much of the hour -- first of a two -part story -- concerned the women's fears of having a deformed or retarded child, and a debate about an abortion.

NBC's Tuesday night special was a documentary, "Man Is My Name," an hour -long film report by Peerre D. Gaisseau of a visit more than a year ago among primitive tribesmen in an unexplored New Guinea jungle. The film concentrated on the reaction of the tribesmen when confronted with such items as steel axes, battery - run record players blaing rock tunes, cigarettes and a life - size, inflatable plastic dummy in a bikini.

The natives, who are cannibals, treated the modern inventions as if they were toys. Nothing much happened during the hour, the photography was often shakey. With sharper editing and a brighter narration, it might have been boiled down to an entertaining half hour.

NBC will mark the 20th anniversary if its "Today" show on Friday, Jan. 14 by having a reunion of the show's four hosts and three of the women who served as "Today" girls.

Taking over a portion of the show will be Dave Garroway, the original host who served from 1952 to 1961; John Chancellor who followed for a year or so; Hugh Downs who retired last fall, and Frank McGee who succeeded him.

Jack Lescoulie, who worked with Garroway for nine years on the daily program, will return for the day and so will Estelle Parsons, Helen O'Connell and Betsy Palmer -- each a "Today" girl in her time. Frank Blair, the newscaster, is the only on-camera regular still with the show, and Paul Cunningham, now a news reporter, was at the outset one of the program's writers.

THE THIRD LIFE OF GRANGE COPELAND
By Alice WAlker
(Avon N405/95c
256 pp.)

By an author who "writes exceedingly well with power, sensitivity and all - pervading humanity" (Publishers' Weekly), THE THIRD LIFE OF GRANGE COPELAND is a novel of three generations of a southern black family whose lives are fettered with white racial oppression and, even more importantly, with their own psychological frustrations inbeing black. The gradual realization that self - hate is a vicious destructive force leads to the acceptance of the knowledge that all men are brothers.

Grange Copeland is a farmer who deserts his wife and children to seek the freedom he feels must be found in the North. But freedom eludes him there as it did at home in Georgia. Prejudices there are merely manifested in a different manner. When Grange returns home, he sees that his grown son's life is a mirror of his own, but when his son is sentenced to jail for murder, Grange takes in Ruth, his granddaughter.

Through a warm, affectionate relationship with Ruth, Grange begins his third life, realizing there is no excuse to desert one's responsibilities and that the ultimate freedom is within oneself.

U.S., Brazil Work To Stop Fishing War

BRASILIA (AP) - The United States and Brazil are operating a hot line and taking other steps to prevent the fishing war on the west coast of South America from spreading east.

The communications link gives Brazilian officials rapid access to U.S. officials in Brazil, and they in turn can report instantly to Washington.

At the same time -- despite public denials -- the two governments are looking the other way when potential incidents arise.

The tacit agreement reflects U.S. and Brazilian desire not to let stray fishing boats or occasional passage by U.S. warships and planes disturb one of the most solid alliances the United States has in Latin America.

It contrasts with the strained relations the United States has on the Pacific coast with Ecuador and Peru, which have resumed seizing U. S. tuna boats with the start of the fishing seasons.

The understanding, as it is described by some U. S. officials, emerged from a deadlock between Brazil and the United States in fishing talks last year.

The United States, which recognizes a territorial limit of only 12 miles for fishing, has refused to give in to Brazil's insistence on the 200-mile jurisdiction that Ecuador and Peru also claim. More talks are scheduled before the start of the shrimp and lobster fishing season in March.

U.S. officials appear optimistic about reaching an agreement that will avoid reference to the 200-mile limit and mention only "conservation" aspects of fishing contorol. Brazil has said it "will not move one centimeter" in its demands for recognition of the limit, but last year Brazil and several other nations agreed on temporary shrimping arrangements using the conservation approach.

Since the stalemate, the United States and Brazil have been doing their best to avoid incidents.

One Florida boat claimed the Brazilian navy shot at it and chased it out of the 200-mile zone, but there was much confusion surrounding the incident and it was never clear what really happened.

Later, according to fishing industry sources, U.S. shrimpers began studying ways to avoid casting in the area, especially in large numbers. There have been none of the confrontations which have cost the U.S. tuna industry more than $3 million in fines for operating in waters claimed by other Latin - American nations.

Most optimistic juggler in the world is the fellow in the treasury department who thinks he's going to be able to balance the budget.

Car Buyer Victimized

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Victor discovered that a fraud in need was a fraud in deed. As he was admiring a foreign sports car parked at a curb, its alleged owner came up to him and offered to sell him the automobile at a low price. And not one to look a gift car in the face, Victor bought it.

Unfortunately, while the price was a steal, Victor soon discovered that it was the car that was stolen. And when he was forced to return it to its true owner, he demanded the return of $500 that he had spent in repairing it.

"Since you're getting back an automobile that's in substantially better condition than the one that was stolen," he told the true owner, "I'm entitled to get back the bucks I spent to improve its condition."

"You're dreaming," responded the ungrateful owner, "if you think I'm going to give you back a penny. I never told you to fix up my car. You did it on your own. And, while I appreciate it, all you're entitled to in return is my hearty thanks, but that's all."

More interested in money than thanks, Victor took the matter to court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit victimized Victor to get back his $500.

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that an automobile owner canot be held responsible for repairs made to his automobile that are made without his knowledge or consent. (Based upon a 1963 Florida District Court of Appeals Decision)

Jet Air Turbulence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "All of a sudden the tail went up and it seemed like we were on a roller coaster," a passenger recalled in describing the effect that clear air turbulence had on a National Airlines jumbo jet with 331 persons aboard.

Twenty-five persons were injured, three seriously, when the plane encountered the mysterious weather phenomenon Tuesday at an altitude of 31,000 feet over Texas.

"Everything went flying," a passenger said. "People's shoes were torn off their feet. Meals were being served and there was food going everywhere."

"I felt like a basketball being bounced around," another passenger said.

"I felt my head hit the ceiling," another related. "Then my whole body was pressed against it. I looked down and could see the floor coming up."

Scientists know little about the air turbulence that slammed the plane's tail. It occurs in generally clear weather between 20,000 and 35,000 feet and can't be detected even by radar.

The Boeing 747 jetliner was three hours out of Miami on a five-hour nonstop flight to Los Angeles.

"I think the whole thing lasted about three seconds," said a stewardess, Yvonne Marlett, 20, of Miami.

The unexpected jolt was felt most by those at the rear of the plane. The airline said no one with a fastened seatbelt was hurt.

"People were screaming, kids were crying and some were panicking. Others were hollering for a doctor," said one of the passengers, Navy Medical Corpsman Calvin Shirley, 22, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. He and two doctors aboard helped the injured as the plane continued to Los Angeles.

The injured were taken to three hospitals. All but five were discharged within hours.

A National spokesman said the only apparent damage to the plane was dents and holes in interior walls from luncheon trays and light baggage. Federal Aviation Administration inspectors pronounced the plane structurally sound, and it returned to Miami later in the day.

Pros Plod, Amateurs Sleep

WASHINGTON — On the surface, the political atmosphere here seems flat and dull, but under the surface there is quite a lot of exciting activity, which could be important and even decisive in the presidential voting next November.

It is in these quiet periods, even before the presidential primary elections, when the hard work of organization and registration is done, and if you watch the back pages of the newspapers, you will see considerable evidence of this careful preliminary foundation building.

Almost without notice, for example, the legislatures in most of the large states have been passing bills to permit the 11 million newly enfranchised 18-to-21 -year -olds to vote next November on campus, rather than at the place of their parents' residence. This could make a difference of several million votes, and in a few key states, could tip the balance to one party or the other.

Also, there is a move on here in the Democratic - controlled Congress to pass legislation that would enable voters to register by mail, and this, too, would undoubtedly increase the size of the vote substantially and probably favor the Democratic presidential nominee.

Much will depend, too, on the outcome of the current battle on Capitol Hill over campaign spending reform. The present system, by general agreement, is not only a scandal but a disgrace.

What is going on in these rather dull, scattered and technical debates over election spending and registration is really the critical strategic battle of the campaign. These things are going to set the stage for the big drama later on. They are going to decide who votes, for one thing, which is not incidental in an election, and who has money for television, which in the frenzy next October may be critical.

And the interesting paradox at the moment is that even the young people with the most education on the intricate American federal and electoral system, and with the most energy and the loudest grievances, are not really very active sin these preliminary battles. Some of them are, of course, but most of them are "waiting for the election," though what is going on right now in these seemingly dreary nuts and bolts debates could actually decide the election.

The election is flat and dull on the surface precisely because the candidates aree working underground on the substructure of the campaign. They are not polishing sentences, but organizing teams and gathering funds. That is what this phase of a presidential election campaign is all about, and it is far too important to be left merely to the candidates and their staffs, and the organized lobbies.

Labor's political acitivity these days illustrates the point. George Meany, the president of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, is very active on the propaganda front.

But big labor is too experienced to stop there. Underneath all George Meany's hawkish and protectionist arguments, and his demands for more money for the workers, his director of the AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education, Alexander E. Barkan, is concentrating on showing labor leaders all over the country how to get their places in the Democratic presidential nominating convention next summer, under the new rules of that convention.

The White House and the Republican National Committee are doing the same thing. They are raising funds. They are quietyly blocking legislation for campaign expenditure reform, while seeming to support it, and trying to limit the registration of the new young voters.

The new rising enfranchised generation has immense potential political power.

Television Escape Cut Off For Viewers

NEW YORK (AP) -- There comes an occasional night when, despite the work -a-day viewer's yearning to shuck real - life problems for the fantasy world of a favorite television action show, escape is cut off.

Tuesday night was one of them. "Mod Squad," usually a reliable escape hatch, started by having Pete Cochran get a brain concussion, and for the rest of the hour he was staggering around trying to solve a case, gasping for breath and with cloudy vision. It was just too painful for relaxed viewing and besides, heavy breathing and staggering becomes boring and irksome after a few minutes.

A bit later, "Marcus Welby, M.D." came along with a clinical treatment on German measles, mildly diluted by a story line. It explored in detail the danger to unborn children when the mothers suffer from the disease during pregnancy.

Much of the hour -- first of a two -part story -- concerned the women's fears of having a deformed or retarded child, and a debate about an abortion.

NBC's Tuesday night special was a documentary, "Man Is My Name," an hour -long film report by Peerre D. Gaisseau of a visit more than a year ago among primitive tribesmen in an unexplored New Guinea jungle. The film concentrated on the reaction of the tribesmen when confronted with such items as steel axes, battery - run record players blaiing rock tunes, cigarettes and a life - size, inflatable plastic dummy in a bikini.

The natives, who are cannibals, treated the modern inventions as if they were toys. Nothing much happened during the hour, the photography was often shakey. With sharper editing and a brighter narration, it might have been boiled down to an entertaining half hour.

NBC will mark the 20th anniversary if its "Today" show on Friday, Jan. 14 by having a reunion of the show's four hosts and three of the women who served as "Today" girls.

Taking over a portion of the show will be Dave Garroway, the original host who served from 1952 to 1961; John Chancellor who followed for a year or so; Hugh Downs who retired last fall, and Frank McGee who succeeded him.

Jack Lescoulie, who worked with Garroway for nine years on the daily program, will return for the day and so will Estelle Parsons, Helen O'Connell and Betsy Palmer -- each a "Today" girl in her time.Frank Blair, the newscaster, is the only on-camera regular still with the show, and Paul Cunningham, now a news reporter, was at the outset one of the program's writers.

THE THIRD LIFE OF GRANGE COPELAND
By Alice WAlker
(Avon N405/95c

By an author who "writes exceedingly well with power, sensitivity and all - pervading humanity" (Publishers' Weekly), THE THIRD LIFE OF GRANGE COPELAND is a novel of three generations of a southern black family whose lives are fettered with white racial oppression and, even more importantly, with their own psychological frustrations inbeing black. The gradual realization that self - hate is a vicious destructive force leads to the acceptance of the knowledge that all men are brothers.

Grange Copeland is a farmer who deserts his wife and children to seek the freedom he feels must be found in the North. But freedom eludes him there as it did at home in Georgia. Prejudices there are merely manifested in a different manner. When Grange returns home, he sees that his grown son's life is a mirror of his own, but when his son is sentenced to jail for murder, Grange takes in Ruth, his granddaughter.

Through a warm, affectionate relationship with Ruth, Grange begins his third life, realizing there is no excuse to desert one's responsibilities and that the ultimate freedom is within oneself.

U.S., Brazil Work To Stop Fishing War

BRASILIA (AP) - The United States and Brazil are operating a hot line and taking other steps to prevent the fishing war on the west coast of South America from spreading east.

The communications link gives Brazilian officials rapid access to U.S. officials in Brazil, and they in turn can report instantly to Washington.

At the same time -- despite public denials -- the two governments are looking the other way when potential incidents arise.

The tacit agreement reflects U.S. and Brazilian desire not to let stray fishing boats or occasional passage by U.S. warships and planes disturb one of the most solid alliances the United States has in Latin America.

It contrasts with the strained relations the United States has on the Pacific coast with Ecuador and Peru, which have resumed seizing U. S. tuna boats with the start of the fishing seasons.

The understanding, as it is described by some U. S. officials, emerged from a deadlock between Brazil and the United States in fishing talks last year.

The United States, which recognizes a territorial limit of only 12 miles for fishing, has refused to give in to Brazil's insistence on the 200-mile jurisdiction that Ecuador and Peru also claim. More talks are scheduled before the start of the shrimp and lobster fishing season in March.

U.S. officials appear optimistic about reaching an agreement that will avoid reference to the 200-mile limit and mention only "conservation" aspects of fishing contorol. Brazil has said it "will not move one centimeter" in its demands for recognition of the limit, but last year Brazil and several other nations agreed on temporary shrimping arrangements using the conservation approach.

Since the stalemate, the United States and Brazil have been doing their best to avoid incidents.

One Florida boat claimed the Brazilian navy shot at it and chased it out of the 200-mile zone, but there was much confusion surrounding the incident and it was never clear what really happened.

Later, according to fishing industry sources, U.S. shrimpers began studying ways to avoid casting in the area, especially in large numbers. There have been none of the confrontations which have cost the U.S. tuna industry more than $3 million in fines for operating in waters claimed by other Latin - American nations.

Most optimistic juggler in the world is the fellow in the treasury department who thinks he's going to be able to balance the budget.

Car Buyer Victimized

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Victor discovered that a fraud in need was a fraud in deed. As he was admiring a foreign sports car parked at a curb, its alleged owner came up to him and offered to sell him the automobile at a low price. And not one to look a gift car in the face, Victor bought it.

Unfortunately, while the price was a steal, Victor soon discovered that it was the car that was stolen. And when he was forced to return it to its true owner, he demanded the return of $500 that he had spent in repairing it.

"Since you're getting back an automobile that's in substantially better condition than the one that was stolen," he told the true owner, "I'm entitled to get back the bucks I spent to improve its condition."

"You're dreaming," responded the ungrateful owner, "if you think I'm going to give you back a penny. I never told you to fix up my car. You did it on your own. And, while I appreciate it, all you're entitled to in return is my hearty thanks, but that's all."

More interested in money than thanks, Victor took the matter to court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit victimized Victor to get back his $500.

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that an automobile owner canot be held responsible for repairs made to his automobile that are made without his knowledge or consent. (Based upon a 1963 Florida District Court of Appeals Decision)

BRUCE BIOSSAT

Japan Foreign Aid Is 'Peace Weapon'

By BRUCE BIOSSAT

TOKYO (NEA)

Just at the time the United States is questioning the whole idea of foreign aid, Japan is putting more and more faith in it as a way of stabilizing insecure, underdeveloped lands.

Foreign economic assistance is described in high circles here as a "weapon for peace." The Japanese have no other. For all their enormous economic power, their armed forces are less than half those which can be mobilized by those two tiny neutrals, Switzerland and Sweden.

And, since Japan's mood of pacifism is deep-grained, a military club-in-the-closet would hardly be viewed as a credible deterrent by potential aggressors against this country's weaker Asian neighbors.

So, foreign aid is the thing. It's running around $1.8 billion a year right now (1 per cent of the nation's GNP), with promises to get it up to $4 billion by 1975.

But this government says Japanese foreign aid today must be faulted for other reasons than just its modest size.

The Foreign Ministry's Yasue Katori, deputy director-general of its Economic Cooperation Bureau, told me four flaws mar the aid effort:

- Too much of it is private business assistance and too little is from government sources. The private aid is characterized as "too self-concerned," with loan terms severe and short-range.
- As part of this picture, too much aid is linked with trade benefit for Japan. Aid recipients most often have to agree to buy Japanese goods in return for help. The new goal—to "untie" this aid.
- Japan's aid is heavily concentrated (about 60 per cent) in Asia. If grants to international agencies and direct foreign investments are included, Asia gets 75 per cent of Japanese assistance overseas.

The official view is that aid has to be spread much wider geographically to underscore Japan's new role as a world rather than a regional power and, as a banker put it, to avoid "any semblance of economic aggression" against its Asian neighbors.

- The assistance is not diversified enough to promote the long-range stability of recipient countries, especially in Asia. The official judgment is that aid must be widened to include development of roads, community facilities, schools, hospitals. There is even sentiment for grants of "social capital" to pay part of broad costs of education and other social programs overseas.

It is being said, too, that Japan must boost its neighbors' capacity to manufacture low-technology goods. Implicit in this is the view that this country must import a good part of any resulting output and therefore must shift its own productive effort toward higher technology manufactures. Some of this is going on now.

The outsider listening to this call for self-improvement in the Japanese aid program finds an inescapable contradiction in it.

The intent to spread the effort geographically, to do more in Africa and Latin America, may be real enough. But, clearly, for both Japan and its Pacific neighbors, self-interest in security and well-being seems to dictate heavy stress on economic aid in Asia.

Japanese officials today see Korea, Taiwan, Southeast Asia and nearby lands as trouble-laden places menacing future peace. One leader thinks one of the worst aspects of the tough Oct. 15 U.S. textile agreement is that it applies to Taiwan, South Korea and Hong Kong. By throttling their budding industry, he says, we may "thrust them back to primitiveness."

Despite this unsettling issue, Japan says it will plunge on toward fuller and better economic aid. It sees no other way to begin proving itself as a responsible world power.

Before You Buy

By MARGARET DANA

During the week of January 9, a large conference is being held in New York, and what happens there can have a lot of impact in the coming year on what happens to your money when you buy.

The 61st annual conference of the National Retail Merchants Association (NRMA) – composed of storekeepers from the smallest shop to the biggest department store -- will be tackling the job of finding ways to make enough money to stay in business, and to make your money go further so you will give them YOUR business.

With the many complaints about products and selling one hears constantly these days, you might well ask: "What's any retailer done for me lately that's worth talking about?" There are actually an astonishing number of good answers. I've picked three:

For example, if you have found furniture buying frustrating at times, because the piece delivered falls apart, or has a part missing, or comes in the wrong finish, and you have complained "nobody does anything about it," here's news.

Retailers of furniture have been equally frustrated by these failures of merchandise they've bought for you. They too felt it was high time to put reliability into furniture making and selling.

The NRMA has now developed guides to be used by furniture retailers in accepting the furniture sent them by the manufacturer. These are called "minimum furniture quality acceptance standards," and along with them go a guide for better furniture packing for shipment. NRMA is urging retailers to check their incoming shipments by these guides and to reject at once whatever fails to meet them.

The NRMA supplies stickers printed in red which say, "This order is accepted on condition that the merchandise order here in will conform to the NRMA minimum furniture quality acceptance standards."

And these are extremely good standards that consumers would approve heartily.

They cover such things as: "All joints must be closed tight, well - glued and leave no visible openings. All screws must be TURNED in, not hammered in. Plastic tops must be free from dust spots dull or shining spots, pimples, dents or scratches and other surface imperfections visible under normal usage and light conditions. All padding is to be evenly and securely fastened. All pieces are to be properly padded so that springs cannot be felt through the cover. The piece must be in square and sit squarely on a flat surface... " and so on.

These are just a few of the guides set up to insure that you get a piece of furniture worth what you pay, and that it will do what is expected of it. If you think these new standards are a great idea, drop me a line with your opinion. I'll sent it on to NRMA so all your stores will know you're pleased -- and watching.

Another new service to make customers feel more confident and sure "somebody's listening," is a large envelope filled with colorful pages of plain facts about the furniture or carpeting you've just bought. This envelope, called the "Infolope" by its creator, is a new bridge of communication between this store and its customers. The store -- R. H. Macy of New York, which has numerous branch stores around the country -- thinks an informed customer who has contact with somebody in the store who will "listen" makes the best and most satisfied customer.

So it has begun profiding an "Infolope'with a major purchase of either carpeting or furniture. Inside the envelope are brief little memo pages giving clear simple facts about that purchase -- from delivery date to guarantee, and care of the product for longest service.

A phone number is included so the customer has a direct contact with the right person if a question arises. Customers like this, salespeople like it, store buyers like it.

A third interesting service from a retailer to its customers is the free booklet Sears, Roebuck and Co. provides called "Guide to Informed Buying."

BRUCE BIOSSAT

Japan Foreign Aid Is 'Peace Weapon'

By BRUCE BIOSSAT

TOKYO (NEA)

Just at the time the United States is questioning the whole idea of foreign aid, Japan is putting more and more faith in it as a way of stabilizing insecure, underdeveloped lands.

Foreign economic assistance is described in high circles here as a "weapon for peace." The Japanese have no other. For all their enormous economic power, their armed forces are less than half those which can be mobilized by those two tiny neutrals, Switzerland and Sweden.

And, since Japan's mood of pacifism is deep-grained, a military club-in-the-closet would hardly be viewed as a credible deterrent by potential aggressors against this country's weaker Asian neighbors.

So, foreign aid is the thing. It's running around $1.8 billion a year right now (1 per cent of the nation's GNP), with promises to get it up to $4 billion by 1975.

But this government says Japanese foreign aid today must be faulted for other reasons than just its modest size.

The Foreign Ministry's Yasue Katori, deputy director-general of its Economic Cooperation Bureau, told me four flaws mar the aid effort:

● Too much of it is private business assistance and too little is from government sources. The private aid is characterized as "too self-concerned," with loan terms severe and short-range.

● As part of this picture, too much aid is linked with trade benefit for Japan. Aid recipients most often have to agree to buy Japanese goods in return for help. The new goal—to "untie" this aid.

● Japan's aid is heavily concentrated (about 60 per cent) in Asia. If grants to international agencies and direct foreign investments are included, Asia gets 75 per cent of Japanese assistance overseas.

The official view is that aid has to be spread much wider geographically to underscore Japan's new role as a world rather than a regional power and, as a banker put it, to avoid "any semblance of economic aggression" against its Asian neighbors.

● The assistance is not diversified enough to promote the long-range stability of recipient countries, especially in Asia. The official judgment is that aid must be widened to include development of roads, community facilities, schools, hospitals. There is even sentiment for grants of "social capital" to pay part of broad costs of education and other social programs overseas.

It is being said, too, that Japan must boost its neighbors' capacity to manufacture low-technology goods. Implicit in this is the view that this country must import a good part of any resulting output and therefore must shift its own productive effort toward higher technology manufactures. Some of this is going on now.

The outsider listening to this call for self-improvement in the Japanese aid program finds an inescapable contradiction in it.

The intent to spread the effort geographically, to do more in Africa and Latin America, may be real enough. But, clearly, for both Japan and its Pacific neighbors, self-interest in security and well-being seems to dictate heavy stress on economic aid in Asia.

Japanese officials today see Korea, Taiwan, Southeast Asia and nearby lands as trouble-laden places menacing future peace. One leader thinks one of the worst aspects of the tough Oct. 15 U.S. textile agreement is that it applies to Taiwan, South Korea and Hong Kong. By throttling their budding industry, he says, we may "thrust them back to primitiveness."

Despite this unsettling issue, Japan says it will plunge on toward fuller and better economic aid. It sees no other way to begin proving itself as a responsible world power.

Before You Buy

By MARGARET DANA

During the week of January 9, a large conference is being held in New York, and what happens there can have a lot of impact in the coming year on what happens to your money when you buy.

The 61st annual conference of the National Retail Merchants Association (NRMA) – composed of storekeepers from the smallest shop to the biggest department store -- will be tackling the job of finding ways to make enough money to stay in business, and to make your money go further so you will give them YOUR business.

With the many complaints about products and selling one hears constantly these days, you might well ask: "What's any retailer done for me lately that's worth talking about?"There are actually an astonishing number of good answers, I've picked three:

For example, if you have found furniture buying frustrating at times, because the piece delivered falls apart, or has a part missing, or comes in the wrong finish, and you have complained "nobody does anything about it," here's news.

Retailers of furniture have been equally frustrated by these failures of merchandise they've bought for you. They too felt it was high time to put reliability into furniture making and selling.

The NRMA has now developed guides to be used by furniture retailers in accepting the furniture sent them by the manufacturer. These are called "minimum furniture quality acceptance standards," and along with them go a guide for better furniture packing for shipment. NRMA is urging retailers to check their incoming shipments by these guides and to reject at once whatever fails to meet them.

The NRMA supplies stickers printed in red which say, "This order is accepted on condition that the merchandise order here in will conform to the NRMA minimum furniture quality acceptance standards."

And these are extremely good standards that consumers would approve heartily.

They cover such things as: "All joints must be closed tight, well - glued and leave no visible openings. All screws must be TURNED in, not hammered in. Plastic tops must be free from dust spots dull or shining spots, pimples, dents or scratches and other surface imperfections visible under normal usage and light conditions. All padding is to be evenly and securely fastened. All pieces are to be properly padded so that springs cannot be felt through the cover. The piece must be in square and sit squarely on a flat surface..." and so on.

These are just a few of the guides set up to insure that you get a piece of furniture worth what you pay, and that it will do what is expected of it. If you think these new standards are a great idea, drop me a line with your opinion. I'll sent it on to NRMA so all your stores will know you're pleased -- and watching.

Another new service to make customers feel more confident and sure "somebody's listening," is a large envelope filled with colorful pages of plain facts about the furniture or carpeting you've just bought. DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Popcorn Makes A Fine Snack

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Our family often substitutes popcorn for a meal, especially instead of Sunday supper and sometimes during the week, too.

For three adults, we use one generous cup of unpopped corn, prepared by popping in three tablespoons of shortening which is marked "high in polyunsaturates"). This, when prepared, yields about two quarts per person. No butter is added as the oil and salt used in popping give it a sufficiently good flavor.

Your comment, good or bad, on this practice, would be appreciated.

Dear Reader — Thumbs up for popcorn, if you are careful what you pop it in and what you put on it. About 11 per cent of the calories in plain popcorn are from vegetable fat and over half of these are the polyunsaturated type. It is, then, a very low-fat food and what fat it contains is probably beneficial, since the usual American diet contains limited amounts of polyunsaturated fat.

I would recommend popping it in a small amount of cooking oil. Of these, safflower oil contains the least amount of saturated fat and the largest percentage of polyunsaturated fat. Corn oil is about second on the list. Then leave it plain, seasoned with salt.

This makes a far better snack than most items. For calorie control or fat intake control, it is far superior to potato chips, crackers impregnated with cheese or fat or similar snack items. For calorie restriction, it is superior to any nuts used as snacks. The vegetable oil of cereals, like popcorn, are an important source of Vitamin E. So thumbs up for popcorn and let's hope it replaces a lot of other goodies that are not so good for the health.

Popcorn, along with turkeys, belongs to the tradition of Thanksgiving. The Indians brought the popcorn to the feast and amazed the colonists by popping it. In rural areas a bowl of popcorn by the fireplace was a winter night tradition. Not too long ago, the family sat by the fire, ate apples and popcorn while reading — there were few places with radios and none with TV — but we didn't have as many of a lot of things then that we have now — including too many fat snacks and an epidemic of heart and vascular disease.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Can you please settle an argument in our family about birth control pills. I say that at 16 you can get the pill from your doctor without telling your parents. My mother says you can't until you are 18. Who's right?

Dear Reader — Only your doctor knows who is right, my dear. After all, he is the one who writes the prescription or has the pill. Ask him.

Is Nixon Peaking Too Early?

ART BUCHWALD
in the
Commercial Appeal

WASHINGTON — Is President Nixon going to peak too soon? There is some concern in Washington that after President Nixon goes to Peking and then to Moscow it will be hard for the Republicans to keep interest in him until election day.

Not so, say the people who are programming the President's political campaign.

I can now report what the Republicans have in store for their candidate.

"This is Walter Cronkite speaking to you from Cape Kennedy, where final preparations are being made for a space shot to the moon. The astronauts have been suited up, and they are now coming out of their dressing room to board the trailer and ... wait a minute! One of the men in an astronaut's suit looks like President Nixon. Mike Wallace is down there by the trailer. Mike, doesn't one of the astronauts look exactly like President Nixon?"

"It is President Nixon, Walter. Ron Ziegler has just informed us that the President has decided to visit the moon personally as a gesture toward world peace."

"Mike, is there any chance of speaking to the President?"

"I'll try, Walter. Mr. President, Mr. President, could you tell us why you have decided to go to the moon at this time?"

"Mike, I've always felt the President can find out more about a situation if he goes there himself."

"Mr. President, who are you taking with you on the mission?"

"As you know, Mike, the Apollo space capsule can take three people including myself. I had to make a hard decision, a tough decision, a decision that probably no president of the United States has ever had to make before. I had to choose two people to go with me, and I concluded the two who would be the most helpful are Henry Kissinger and my wife Pat."

"How did you arrive at your choice, Mr. President?"

"Since the moon is considered a foreign matter, it seemed to me Henry Kissinger would be the most informed in the subject. As for Pat, ever since we first started dating, she has always expressed a great interest in the moon."

"Mr. President, are there any political implications to be read in your decision to go to the moon just two weeks before election day?

"Mike, there are always going to be people who say that everything I do has a political motive.

"But my answer to them, Mike, is that the bag of rocks I bring back from the moon will benefit all Americans, Democrats as well as Republicans, the old as well as the young, the poor as well as the rich, the blacks as well as the whites, the farmers in Texas, the factory workers in Michigan, our brave men overseas in the armed forces, the people who live in New York as well as the people who live in California. I intend to do what no other American president has done since the creation. And if that's politics, let them make the most of it."

Popcorn, along with turkeys, belongs to the tradition of Thanksgiving. The Indians brought the popcorn to the feast and amazed the colonists by popping it. In rural areas a bowl of popcorn by the fireplace was a winter night tradition. Not too long ago, the family sat by the fire, ate apples and popcorn while reading — there were few places with radios and none with TV — but we didn't have as many of a lot of things then that we have now — including too many fat snacks and an epidemic of heart and vascular disease.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Can you please settle an argument in our family about birth control pills. I say that at 16 you can get the pill from your doctor without telling your parents. My mother says you can't until you are 18. Who's right?

Dear Reader — Only your doctor knows who is right, my dear. After all, he is the one who writes the prescription or has the pill. Ask him.

Is Nixon Peaking Too Early?

in the
Commercial Appeal

WASHINGTON — Is President Nixon going to peak too soon? There is some concern in Washington that after President Nixon goes to Peking and then to Moscow it will be hard for the Republicans to keep up interest in him until election day.

Not so, say the people who are programming the President's political campaign.

I can now report what the Republicans have in store for their candidate.

"This is Walter Cronkite speaking to you from Cape Kennedy, where final preparations are being made for a space shot to the moon. The astronauts have been suited up, and they are now coming out of their dressing room to board the trailer and ... wait a minute! One of the men in an astronaut's suit looks like President Nixon. MikeWallace is down there by the trailer. Mike, doesn't one of the astronauts look exactly like President Nixon?"

"It is President Nixon, Walter. Ron Ziegler has just informed us that the President has decided to visit the moon personally as a gesture toward world peace."

"Mike, is there any chance of speaking to the President?"

"I'll try, Walter. Mr. President, Mr. President, could you tell us why you have decided to go to the moon at this time?"

"Mike, I've always felt the President can find out more about a situation if he goes there himself."

"Mr. President, who are you taking with you on the mission?"

"As you know, Mike, the Apollo space capsule can take three people including myself. I had to make a hard decision, a tough decision, a decision that probably no president of the United States has ever had to make before. I had to choose two people to go with me, and I concluded the two who would be the most helpful are Henry Kissinger and my wife Pat."

"How did you arrive at your choice, Mr. President?"

"Since the moon is considered a foreign matter, it seemed to me Henry Kissinger would be the most informed in the subject. As for Pat, ever since we first started dating, she has always expressed a great interest in the moon."

"Mr. President, are there any political implications to be read in your decision to go to the moon just two weeks before election day?

"Mike, there are always going to be people who say that everything I do has a political motive.

"But my answer to them, Mike, is that the bag of rocks I bring back from the moon will benefit all Americans, Democrats as well as Republicans, the old as well as the young, the poor as well as the rich, the blacks as well as the whites, the farmers in Texas, the factory workers in Michigan, our brave men overseas in the armed forces, the people who live in New York as well as the people who live in California. I intend to do what no other American president has done since the creation. And if that's politics, let them make the most of it."

To The Editor:

On Dec. 23, '71, during an extensive tour of the Mid and Southwest we stopped for lunch at a motel on the outskirts of Sikeston. There we met a most interesting person. He was so full of enthusiasm for Sikeston that he made us feel glad for just having paused there and we are already talking of spending some time in Sikeston in the future to see if all the people are as friendly as your Mr. R. D. Clayton. What the world needs is more people like Mr. Clayton and we want to thank him publicly for being so kind to strangers passing through your city.

$100 Taken

NEW MADRID — An estimated $100 in cash was reported stolen Monday night from a jukebox at the Harlem Cafe, 601 Russell St.

Marshal O. E. Householder said there was no visible sign of entry and he believed the thief was either hiding in the building at closing, or had a key.

No. 1 Cont. from page 1.

appropriated for day care centers to let mothers in aid to dependent children familes get jobs.

"I would go further," he added, "and require that if the jobs were available, if the persons are physically and mentally able to perform the work, and if the children are properly cared for, that acceptance of work be a condition of eligibility for welfare."

(Paul Williams, the governor's legal aide, said there is legal authority now for establishing day care centers and two exist in St. Louis and Kansas City. Requiring welfare recipients to work if they are able, would require federal approval, he said.)

Taking a new line on welfare payments, the governor noted that more than half the states have no maximum welfare payments fixed by law but instead pay recipients on the basis of actual need according to the amount of money available — a "per cent of need" approach.

He said this "would be far more equitable than the present system of maximum amounts, and it would place our welfare dollars where there is the greatest need. This plan would not necessarily cost more money, it just establishes a fairer method of paying the amount of money appropriated to the eligible recipients."

At the same time he recommended a special welfare fraud law because "there is a growing tendency for some people to seek welfare benefits through misrepresentation and outright fraud."

In other recommendations to provide "a better welfare program — until such time as the federal government accepts its full responsibility for the care of the poor across the nation," the governor proposed:

Increasing the payment for care of the aged and disabled in domiciliary nursing homes from $110 to $150 a month and in practical nursing homes from $125 to $200 a month.

Shifting the vocational rehabilitation program from the Department of Education to the Department of Public Health and Welfare to emphasize the needs of those on public assistance.

Extension of the ADC-U program to allow unemployed fathers to live in the home until they can get jobs while the family still receives aid to dependent children benefits. About 700 families were cut off the rolls when the program ended Dec. 31.

More administrative money for the dividision of welfare so it can keep track of eligibility and meet federal requirements such as mailing checks within 30 days of an application.

In a hint of his budget for 1972-73, to be laid on the legislators' desks when they reconvene Monday afternoon, the governor said he plans to recommend a fourth year of funding an additional $35 million in state aid to schools. This would meet the legislative commitment of increasing state aid by $140 million over a four-year period.

Hearnes said that would boost total state aid to schools to a record of $377 million compared with $145.5 million seven years ago when he took office as governor.

Last Respects Paid

WESTON, Conn. (AP) — Chief Justice Warren Burger and his colleagues on the Supreme Court paid their last respects to former Supreme Court Justice John Marshall Harlan at a simple private funeral Tuesday.

Harlan, who died of cancer in Washington a week ago, had been on the high court 16 years before he retired because of his health last September.

The service was conducted Tuesday in the tiny steepled Emmanuel Church of Weston, an Episcopal church built in 1845. Harlan's ashes were buried in a churchyard ceremony conducted in a drenching rain.

A college classmate of Harlan, the Rev. George A. Trowbridge of New York City, conducted most of the funeral.

Those at the funeral included justices now on the court and former Associate Justices Arthur Goldberg, Abe Fortas and Tom C. Clark.

In all there were about 50 mourners.

Harlan's widow, the former Ethel Andrews, was unable to attend because of illness.

Services For Maurice

PARIS (AP) — Friends and admirers bade adieu to Maurice Chevalier today at the simple funeral ceremonies the famed showman had requested.

Police feared as many as 30,000 persons might invade the village of Marnes la Coquette, on the western edge of Paris, but fewer than 1,000 assembled behind the metal barriers in the square before the tiny Church of Ste. Eugenie, which is 500 yards from Chevalier's luxurious home.

Inside the church were about 150 invited guests, including Princess Grace of Monaco, former boxing champion Georges Carpentier, and Cultural Minister Jacques Duhamel.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur K. Watson sent a large spray of carnations which was on display outside the church. He was represented at the funeral by Cultural Attache Russell Harris.

Chevalier, who created the image of the Parisian boulevardier with his tuxedo, straw hat and walking stick, died Saturday at 83 after three weeks under treatment for a kidney blockage. He requested that the funeral be simple and discreet.

One of the floral decorations was a straw hat made of yellow narcissus.

At the end of the Mass, those inside the church fell into line behind the hearse and walked in silence to the village cemetery.

Only close friends were allowed inside the cemetery while the casket was placed beside the body of Chevalier's mother in a vault. The other special guests filed by later.

It was a chill, damp day with a low haze.

Among the floral tributes was one from Yvonne Vallee, Chevalier's former wife, with a ribbon saying "Yvonne to Maurice."

Two Pemiscot Schools Struck By Burglars

KENNETT — Thieves burglarized two Pemiscot County schools Monday night, making off with apparently little cash but an undetermined amount of checks from one of the school's vaults.

The Pemiscot County Sheriff's Department assisted by the Missouri Highway Patrol are investigating the burglaries at the South Pemiscot Junior High School at Holland and the Delta C-7 High School at Deering.

The burglaries apparently occurred sometime during the night, authorities said, although both schools had been closed for the holiday vacations and reopened Monday.

At the Deering campus, the thieves gained entrance to the high school building by breaking out a window on the north side of the building. The school superintendent said thieves managed to knock a hole in the vault and scattered records and reports, apparently in a search for money. Although very little cash was taken, the superintendent said an undetermined number of personal checks were missing from the vault. "We don't know the amounts of the checks yet, but they were checks from students for payment of pictures, that sort of check," he noted. Thieves apparently used a sledge hammer to break into the vault, entering from the bathroom wall.

At the Holland campus, an undetermined amount of coins were taken from a drink machine and a vending machine. An attempt was reportedly made to enter the school's vault, however, it proved futile.

The Deering school break -in was similar to one which occurred on the school grounds two years ago, a school official said, when thieves also made off with a number of checks and little cash.

Missourians Held

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark. — Willis Mitchell Selsor, 23, arrested by Missouri authorities as a suspect in the Saturday night shooting of a Blytheville merchant, waived extradition Monday and was housed at the Mississippi County Jail here.

Another Pemiscot County, Mo., man, 21-year-old Phillip Barry Ames, was arrested by Missouri police Sunday and returned earlier to the Blytheville jail.

Charges against the two are pending, according to the prosecuting Attorney's office, but charged with assault with intent to kill, burglary, grand larceny and robbery.

They are suspected of breaking into the rural home of Harry Mantz late Saturday night, and shooting Mantz in the back as he entered the house.

Matz, owner-operator of Fosser's Liquor Store at Bl heville, is in the intensive ca unit at Memphis' Baptist Hospital. His condition is listed as serious to critical, according to hospital authorities.

Pemiscot County Sheriff Thad O. Shelly said Selsor was arrested at 8 p.m. Sunday west of Hayti, Mo. Selsor had a bullet wound in his right arm, the sheriff said.

Mississippi County authorities said that when Mantz, his wife and their son entered their home Saturday shortly after 11:30 p.m. Mantz spotted one of the burglars and shot at him, wounding him.

After the shooting, authorities said, one of the thieves fled in the Mantz automobile. The other burglar tied up Mantz, his wife and son and fled on foot.

Mrs. Mantz freed herself a short time later and called police.

THE SHADOWS OF THE HOUSE
by Meg Elizabeth Atkins
(Avon N406/95c
256 pp.)

Meg Elizabeth Atkins' THE SHADOWS OF THE HOUSE transcends the conventions of gothic suspense as it follows an unlikely quartet of people who combat the unknown with a lusty sense of life and its mysteries.

When Uncle Jonathan died, he left his own sprawling house to his niece (known affectionately as Mouse). It was a house that had played an important part in Mouse's childhood and in her uncle's famous children's books, but there was a perverse secret locked in Uncle Jonathan's Victorian study -- the key to her soul.

Joined by a naive 15-year -old boy, an unscrupulous fortune hunter and an honest, virile young man, Mouse finds herself in the spell of the house, threatened by the presence of the shadow of someone already dead.

LOOSE CHIPPINGS
by Thomas Gerald Wheeler
(Camelot ZV187/75c
192 pp.)

Thomas Gerald Wheeler's modern fantasy is set in a mystical English town called Loose Chippings. When Bob Vickery's rented automobile breaks down near the village, he notices that the town is composed of tiny houses with medieval roofs and overhanging balconies lining narrow winding streets that might have stood unchanged since Chaucer's time.

Vickery's first days in Losse Chippings seem as idyllic as the village, but then a haunting menace appears to surround the gentle life and he begins to question why Loose Chippings isn't shown on the road map, nor is the road leading to it.

The repairs on his car are strangely delayed and all his queries about the village are politely evaded by the villagers. Then he discovers they won't allow him to leave, and the peculiar events which follow make reality and imagination seem to change and interact in strange and mysterious ways.

LOOSE CHIPPINGS is a contemporary tale with the fanciful flavor of James Hilton's LOST HORIZONS. Book Gleanings called it "Filled with mystery ... Exciting." Best Sellers commented that it is "Delightful."

JOSEPH DIEBOLD

KELSO — Joseph F. Diebold, 97, founder of Diebold Orchards, Inc., and prominent area businessman, died Monday evening at a Cape Girardeau nursing home.

Born Sept. 1, 1874, in Kelso, he married Josephine C. Ressel on Aug. 7, 1900. She died June 5, 1928.

As a young man, Diebold owned the Kelso Roller Mill Company, later incorporated and thereafter known as Kelso Milling Company. After selling his interest in that firm, he managed the Chaffee Mill and Grain Company. He later became interested in dairy and fruit farms, which he operated with his son and grandsons. Along with other Kelso businessmen, he helped incorporate Farmers and Merchants Bank of Kelso, serving as president. He was also instrumental in bringing electrical service to the Kelso area.

He was a lifelong member of St. Augustine's Catholic church where he served as an usher and organized the parish band. He was the oldest member of the Knights of Columbus in Southeast Missouri.

Surviving are one son, Herman J. Diebold of Kelso; two daughters, Mrs. John Keusenkothen of Kelso, and Sister M. Jacinta of the Franciscan Order of Wheaton, Ill.; one brother, Charles Diebold of Oran; one sister, Mrs. Frances Kaderbeck of St. Louis; 15 grandchildren and 12 great grandchildren.

The body is at the Bisplinghoff funeral home in Illmo where friends may call after 7 p.m. today. Members of St. Augustine's Sodality will recite a rosary at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, followed by a recitation of the rosary by the Knights of Columbus at 8 p.m.

Services will be Friday at 10 a.m. in St. Augustine's Catholic church in Kelso where Msgr. Jossph F. Keusenkothen will celebrate a requiem mass.

Burial will be in the parish cemetery.

appropriated for day care centers to let mothers in aid to dependent children familes get jobs.

"I would go further," he added, "and require that if the jobs were available, if the persons are physically and mentally able to perform the work, and if the children are properly cared for, that acceptance of work be a condition of eligibility for welfare."

(Paul Williams, the governor's legal aide, said there is legal authority now for establishing day care centers and two exist in St. Louis and Kansas City. Requiring welfare recipients to work if they are able, would require federal approval, he said.)

Taking a new line on welfare payments, the governor noted that more than half the states have no maximum welfare payments fixed by law but instead pay recipients on the basis of actual need according to the amount of money available — a "per cent of need" approach.

He said this "would be far more equitable than the present system of maximum amounts, and it would place our welfare dollars where there is the greatest need. This plan would not necessarily cost more money, it just establishes a fairer method of paying the amount of money appropriated to the eligible recipients."

At the same time he recommended a special welfare fraud law because "there is a growing tendency for some people to seek welfare benefits through misrepresentation and outright fraud."

In other recommendations to provide "a better welfare program — until such time as the federal government accepts its full responsibility for the care of the poor across the nation," the governor proposed:

Increasing the payment for care of the aged and disabled in domiciliary nursing homes from $110 to $150 a month and in practical nursing homes from $125 to $200 a month.

Shifting the vocational rehabilitation program from the Department of Education to the Department of Public Health and Welfare to emphasize the needs of those on public assistance.

Extension of the ADC-U program to allow unemployed fathers to live in the home until they can get jobs while the family still receives aid to dependent children benefits. About 700 families were cut off the rolls when the program ended Dec. 31.

More administrative money for the dividision of welfare so it can keep track of eligibility and meet federal requirements such as mailing checks within 30 days of an application.

In a hint of his budget for 1972-73, to be laid on the legislators' desks when they reconvene Monday afternoon, the governor said he plans to recommend a fourth year of funding an additional $35 million in state aid to schools. This would meet the legislative commitment of increasing state aid by $140 million over a four-year period.

Hearnes said that would boost total state aid to schools to a record of $377 million compared with $145.5 million seven years ago when he took office as governor.

Last Respects Paid

WESTON, Conn. (AP) — Chief Justice Warren Burger and his colleagues on the Supreme Court paid their last respects to former Supreme Court Justice John Marshall Harlan at a simple private funeral Tuesday.

Harlan, who died of cancer in Washington a week ago, had been on the high court 16 years before he retired because of his health last September.

The service was conducted Tuesday in the tiny steepled Emmanuel Church of Weston, an Episcopal church built in 1845. Harlan's ashes were buried in a churchyard ceremony conducted in a drenching rain.

A college classmate of Harlan, the Rev. George A. Trowbridge of New York City, conducted most of the funeral.

Those at the funeral included justices now on the court and former Associate Justices Arthur Goldberg, Abe Fortas and Tom C. Clark.

In all there were about 50 mourners.

Harlan's widow, the former Ethel Andrews, was unable to attend because of illness.

Services For Maurice

PARIS (AP) — Friends and admirers bade adieu to Maurice Chevalier today at the simple funeral ceremonies the famed showman had requested.

Police feared as many as 30,000 persons might invade the village of Marnes la Coquette, on the western edge of Paris, but fewer than 1,000 assembled behind the metal barriers in the square before the tiny Church of Ste. Eugenie, which is 500 yards from Chevalier's luxurious home.

Inside the church were about 150 invited guests, including Princess Grace of Monaco, former boxing champion Georges Carpentier, and Cultural Minister Jacques Duhamel.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur K. Watson sent a large spray of carnations which was on display outside the church. He was represented at the funeral by Cultural Attache Russell Harris.

Chevalier, who created the image of the Parisian boulevardier with his tuxedo, straw hat and walking stick, died Saturday at 83 after three weeks under treatment for a kidney blockage. He requested that the funeral be simple and discreet.

One of the floral decorations was a straw hat made of yellow narcissus.

At the end of the Mass, those inside the church fell into line behind the hearse and walked in silence to the village cemetery.

Only close friends were allowed inside the cemetery while the casket was placed beside the body of Chevalier's mother in a vault. The other special guests filed by later.

It was a chill, damp day with a low haze.

Among the floral tributes was one from Yvonne Vallee, Chevalier's former wife, with a ribbon saying "Yvonne to Maurice."

To The Editor:

On Dec. 23, '71, during an extensive tour of the Mid and Southwest we stopped for lunch at a motel on the outskirts of Sikeston. There we met a most interesting person. He was so full of enthusiasm for Sikeston that he made us feel glad for just having paused there and we are already talking of spending some time in Sikeston in the future to see if all the people are as friendly as your Mr. R. William Fifield's THE DEVIL'S MARCHIONESS is Avon's newest book of occult fiction.

$100 Taken

NEW MADRID — An estimated $100 in cash was reported stolen Monday night from a jukebox at the Harlem Cafe, 601 Russell St.

Marshal O. E. Householder said there was no visible sign of entry and he believed the thief was either hiding in the building at closing, or had a key.

Two Pemiscot Schools Struck By Burglars

KENNETT — Thieves burglarized two Pemiscot County schools Monday night, making off with apparently little cash but an undetermined amount of checks from one of the school's vaults.

The Pemiscot County Sheriff's Department assisted by the Missouri Highway Patrol are investigating the burglaries at the South Pemiscot Junior High School at Holland and the Delta C-7 High School at Deering.

The burglaries apparently occurred sometime during the night, authorities said, although both schools had been closed for the holiday vacations and reopened Monday.

At the Deering campus, the thieves gained entrance to the high school building by breaking out a window on the north side of the building. The school superintendent said thieves managed to knock a hole in the vault and scattered records and reports, apparently in a search for money. Although very little cash was taken, the superintendent said an undetermined number of personal checks were missing from the vault. "We don't know the amounts of the checks yet, but they were checks from students for payment of pictures, that sort of check," he noted. Thieves apparently used a sledge hammer to break into the vault, entering from the bathroom wall.

At the Holland campus, an undetermined amount of coins were taken from a drink machine and a vending machine. An attempt was reportedly made to enter the school's vault, however, it proved futile.

The Deering school break -in was similar to one which occurred on the school grounds two years ago, a school official said, when thieves also made off with a number of checks and little cash.

Grain Market

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybeans and grain futures prices were mostly mixed in early dealings on the Chicago Board of Trade today.

On the opening, wheat was ¼ to ¾ cents a bushel higher, March 1.62¼; corn was 1/8 lower to 1/8 higher, March 1.22 3/8; oats were 1/8 to ¼ lower, March 73 3/8 cents and soybeans were unchanged to 1 3/8 higher, January 3.04 5/8.

Missourians Held

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark. — Willis Mitchell Selsor, 23, arrested by Missouri authorities as a suspect in the Saturday night shooting of a Blytheville merchant, waived extradition Monday and was housed at the Mississippi County Jail here.

Another Pemiscot County, Mo., man, 21-year-old Phillip Barry Ames, was arrested by Missouri police Sunday and returned earlier to the Blytheville jail.

Charges against the two are pending, according to the prosecuting Attorney's office, but charged with assault with intent to kill, burglary, grand larceny and robbery.

They are suspected of breaking into the rural home of Harry Mantz late Saturday night, and shooting Mantz in the back as he entered the house.

Matz, owner-operator of Fosser's Liquor Store at Bi heville, is in the intensive ca unit at Memphis' Baptist Hospital. His condition is listed as serious to critical, according to hospital authorities.

Pemiscot County Sheriff Thad O. Shelly said Selsor was arrested at 8 p.m. Sunday west of Hayti, Mo. Selsor had a bullet wound in his right arm, the sheriff said.

Mississippi County authorities said that when Mantz, his wife and their son entered their home Saturday shortly after 11:30 p.m. Mantz spotted one of the burglars and shot at him, wounding him.

After the shooting, authorities said, one of the thieves fled in the Mantz automobile. The other burglar tied up Mantz, his wife and son and fled on foot.

Mrs. Mantz freed herself a short time later and called police.

THE SHADOWS OF THE HOUSE
by Meg Elizabeth Atkins
(Avon N406/95c
256 pp.)

Meg Elizabeth Atkins' THE SHADOWS OF THE HOUSE transcends the conventions of gothic suspense as it follows an unlikely quartet of people who combat the unknown with a lusty sense of life and its mysteries.

When Uncle Jonathan died, he left his own sprawling house to his niece (known affectionately as Mouse). It was a house that had played an important part in Mouse's childhood and in her uncle's famous children's books, but there was a perverse secret locked in Uncle Jonathan's Victorian study -- the key to her soul.

Joined by a naive 15-year -old boy, an unscrupulous fortune hunter and an honest, virile young man, Mouse finds herself in the spell of the house, threatened by the presence of the shadow of someone already dead.

LOOSE CHIPPINGS
by Thomas Gerald Wheeler
(Camelot ZV187/75c
192 pp.)

Thomas Gerald Wheeler's modern fantasy is set in a mystical English town called Loose Chippings. When Bob Vickery's rented automobile breaks down near the village, he notices that the town is composed of tiny houses with medieval roofs and overhanging balconies lining narrow winding streets that might have stood unchanged since Chaucer's time.

Vickery's first days in Losse Chippings seem as idyllic as the village, but then a haunting menace appears to surround the gentle life and he begins to question why Loose Chippings isn't shown on the road map, nor is the road leading to it.

The repairs on his car are strangely delayed and all his queries about the village are politely evaded by the villagers. Then he discovers they won't allow him to leave, and the peculiar events which follow make reality and imagination seem to change and interact in strange and mysterious ways.

LOOSE CHIPPINGS is a contemporary tale with the fanciful flavor of James Hilton's LOST HORIZONS. Book Gleanings called it "Filled with mystery ... Exciting." Best Sellers commented that it is "Delightful."

Griese Named NFL's No. 1

MIAMI AP - Quarterback Bob Griese, the former Purdue All-American who guided his Miami Dolphins to the American Football Conference crown last Sunday, has been named winner of the Jim Thorpe Memorial Trophy as the outstanding player in professional football, a team spokesman announced Tuesday.

The five-year Dolphin veteran received the award after leading his National Football League club to a 10-3-1 season mark with postseason victories over the Kansas City Chiefs and Baltimore Colts to clinch the AFC title.

The Dolphins meet the Dallas Cowboys in the Super Bowl showdown Jan. 16.

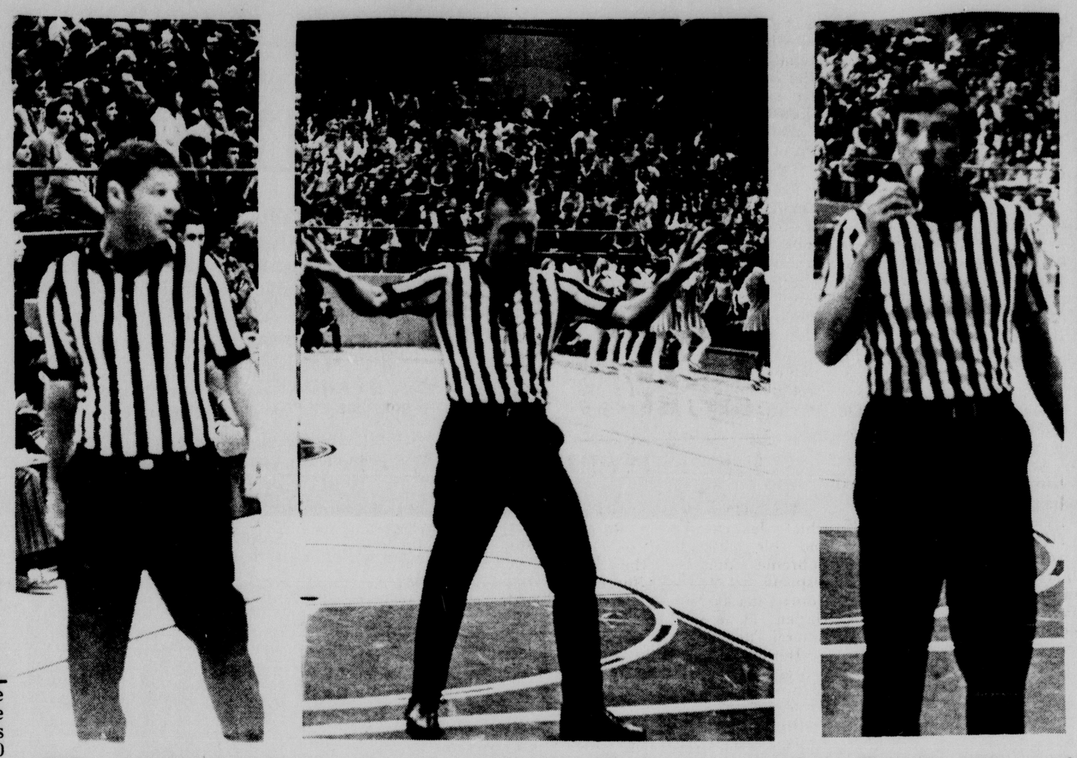
San Francisco 49er quarter-back John Brodie was last year's recipient of the Thorpe award which is voted upon by captains, co-captains and player representatives of the 25 NFL teams.

Griese, 26, was runnerup in Heisman Trophy balloting as a senior at Purdue.

Most of the pueblo tribes of the American southwest did not fish since they regarded fish as sacred and did not eat them.

The smallest moss is the pygmy moss; the longest is the brook moss, which forms streamers up to three feet long in flowing water.

Some archeologists figure that men arrived on the North American continent as far back as 30,000 to 40,000 years ago.



FIVE of Southeast Missouri's most renown basketball officials were on hand to official the 15th annual Bloomfield Holiday tournament. Three of them, Bill Trout, Bob Johnson and Carl "Goober" Townsend, are shown in action. Buddy Godwin, the Daily Standard's "whistle tooter of the year", was shown in an earlier photo while the fifth member of the officiating team, Melvin "Churn" Williams, got away from the photographers camera.

Maryland Legislators Warn Baltimore Colts

BALTIMORE (AP) — Where the Baltimore Colts will play 1972 preseason games remained in doubt today, but two Maryland congressmen have warned of antitrust legislation unless regular season games are played at home.

And Rep. Edward Garmatz, also D-Md., said he would introduce similar legislation when Congress reconvenes latter this month. Emanuel Cellar, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, has a similar bill in the hopper.

Meanwhile the Colts, who are rumored dickering for a transfer to Tampa, Fla., offered the prospect Tuesday on higher 1972 ticket prices unless a suitable preseason schedule can be arranged.

In an interview, General Manager Don Klosterman also said the Colts had not sought permission from the National Football League to move their franchise.

"We agree with Commissioner Pete Rozelle," Klosterman said," that a team should not move as long as it is supported and can operate in a reasonable economic manner.

"But we also feel that no other owner or the commissioner can legislate the team into bankruptcy."

The Colts scheduled preseason games at home last fall-for the first time in 10 years- but averaged only 15,000 for conteste with Kansas City, Chicago and Dallas.

Klosterman praised Colt fans' attendance at regular-season games, but said "preseason games are an important part of our over-all financial structure."

Klosterman said the NFL club probably would decide within two weeks on the site of their proposed three home preseason games, and any necessary adjustment in ticket prices.

But as to talk that Jack Nicklaus might be trying to take over the Colts, the pro golfing great got a chuckle over being rumored as head of a syndicate trying to buy the Colts for $23 million.

"Twenty-three million?" Nicklaus asked Tuesday. "They must think I'm Arnold Palmer.

That's a lot of birdies.

"If somebody offered me a team for $23 million, I'd begin to choke," he said. "I'm still trying to get my first million ....to keep anyway."Speaking from his lakeside home in Lost Tree Village, Fla., Nicklaus admitted he had been-and still is-interested in the possibility of being a pro football club owner.

"We have been thinking more about a possible expansion team," Nicklaus said of his affiliation with furniture king Harry Manguarian. "We're still doing our homework" on possible NFL ownership.

Admittedly a football nut, the double Grand Slam winner said his future pro football possibilities "are a matter of putting together a syndicate."

Fred Schaus Molds Los Angeles Lakers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Of the 10 Los Angeles Lakers who have been unbeatable in the National Basketball Association since October, seven were acquired by trade or purchase. The architect: Fred Schaus.

The general manager of the team that seeks to extend its record winning streak to 32 games tonight against the Cavaliers in Cleveland will take only a piece of the credit.

"Every trade we've made in the 12 years I've been here has always been a three-man committee agreement," Schaus said, referring to the Lakers' owner, the coach, and the general manager.

"If we're not all really in agreement and excited about the deal, we don't make it," said Schaus, who coached the Lakers for seven years before moving to the front office in 1967.

He said the key transaction to the future of the Lakers, who are an amazing 37-3 for the season, occurred in 1969. It brought 7-foot-1 Wilt Chamberlain to Los Angeles from Philadelphia for Darrell Imhoff, Archie Clark and Jerry Chambers.

"When you can acquire a center of Wilt's stature and ability and talent, it has to be the biggest of all trades," said Schaus. "We gave up three players and some people believed a lot of cash was involved. There was no cash, just three men for one."

Chamberlain helped make the trade because he wanted to play on the West Coast, particularly in Los Angeles, Schaus said.

Two other Laker starters— guard Gail Goodrich and Forward Happy Hairston—came from other teams, though Goodrich originally was a Laker. He went to Phoenix in the 1968 expansion draft.

Wasn't exposing Goodrich to the draft a monumental mistake?

The Lakers were backed into a corner at the time, said Schaus. With Jerry West, Walt Hazzard and Clark, Los Angeles had three good guards and "Gail asked to be put up for expansion because he wanted to play somewhere."

With Chamberlain around, the Lakers no longer needed 7foot Mel Counts, who was traded to Phoenix for Goodrich two seasons ago.

"Without Gail right now we would not be nearly the club we are," Schaus said.

The Lakers came out smiling from two other deals—Hairston from Detroit for Bill Hewitt in 1969 and guard-forward Keith Erickson from Chicago for Erwin Mueller in 198.

The Lakers also bought guard-forward Pat Riley from the then San Diego Rockets, the same team that gave up forward John Trapp on waivers. Guard Flynn Robinson came from Cincinnati for a No. 2 future draft choice. Center-forward Leroy Ellis was obtained from Portland for cash and a 1972 No. 2 draft choice.

The three Lakers who haven't played with another NBA team are guards West and Jim Cleamons—a rookie—and starting forward Jim McMillian. All were No. 1 draft choices, with Clemons and McMillian arriving the last two years.

West came to the Lakers in 1960 from West Virginia where he played for Schaus, and Schaus as a rookie pro coach, made sure he was the top draft choice.

Schaus believes that the coaching of Bill Sharman, signed after leading the Utah Stars in the American Basketball Association, and of assistant coach K.C. Jones has been the overriding factor in the Lakers' success.

"I feel that we could have had a lot of different players and Bill and K.C. could have molded them into the same type of team," Schaus said.

Schaus is astonished over the Lakers' streak.

"I just can't believe it. To win 31 in a row, and we've played every team except Cincinnati in the streak—unbelievable!"

Schaus doesn't believe a law of averages applies to athletics but the Lakers can't win forever.

"Who knows? We could play well like we have and lose three in a row."

How will he feel when the Lakers lose a game?

"Let's wait until that happens. After 31 games, I'm not prepared for it. I don't think the players are, either," Schaus said.

Asked whether he plans more trades or feels satisified with the current club, Schaus said he had nothing brewing.

Griese Named NFL's No. 1

MIAMI AP - Quarterback Bob Griese, the former Purdue All-American who guided his Miami Dolphins to the American Football Conference crown last Sunday, has been named winner of the Jim Thorpe Memorial Trophy as the outstanding player in professional football, a team spokesman announced Tuesday.

The five-year Dolphin veteran received the award after leading his National Football League club to a 10-3-1 season mark with postseason victories over the Kansas City Chiefs and Baltimore Colts to clinch the AFC title.

The Dolphins meet the Dallas Cowboys in the Super Bowl showdown Jan. 16.

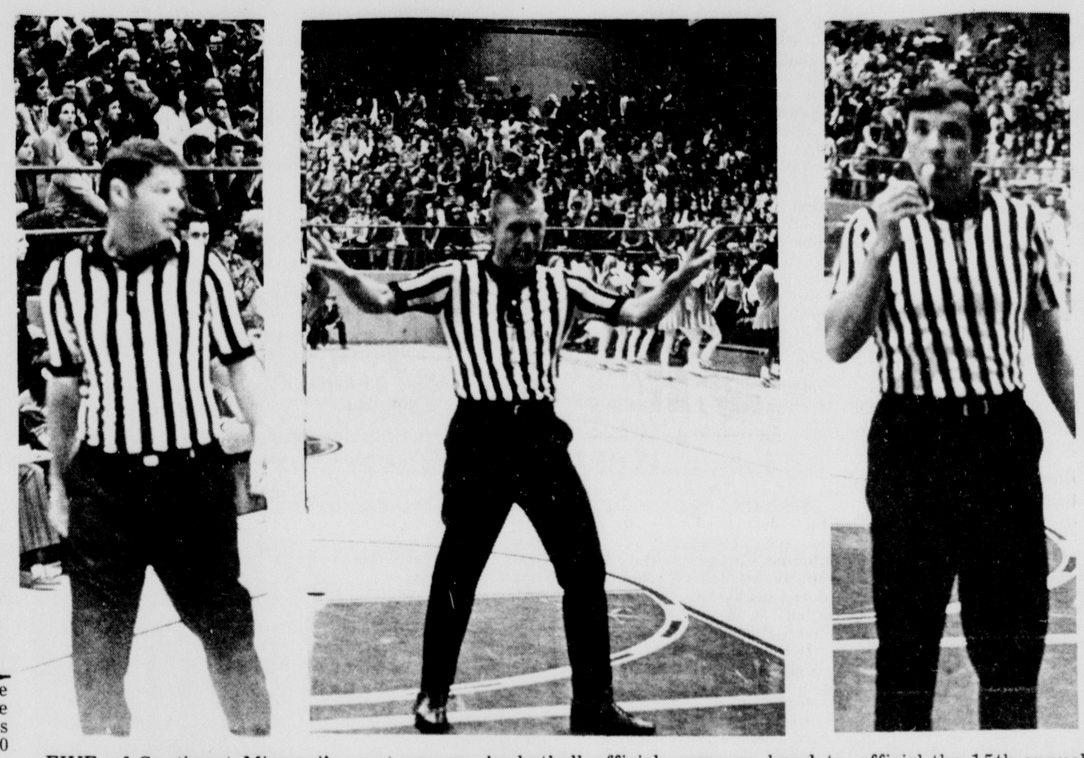
San Francisco 49er quarter-back John Brodie was last year's recipient of the Thorpe award which is voted upon by captains, co-captains and player representatives of the 25 NFL teams.

Griese, 26, was runnerup in Heisman Trophy balloting as a senior at Purdue.

Most of the pueblo tribes of the American southwest did not fish since they regarded fish as sacred and did not eat them.

The smallest moss is the pygmy moss; the longest is the brook moss, which forms streamers up to three feet long in flowing water.

Some archeologists figure that men arrived on the North American continent as far back as 30,000 to 40,000 years ago.



FIVE of Southeast Missouri's most renown basketball officials were on hand to official the 15th annual Bloomfield Holiday tournament. Three of them, Bill Trout, Bob Johnson and Carl "Goober" Townsend, are shown in action. Buddy Godwin, the Daily Standard's "whistle tooter of the year", was shown in an earlier photo while the fifth member of the officiating team, Melvin "Churn" Williams, got away from the photographers camera.

Maryland Legislators Warn Baltimore Colts

BALTIMORE (AP) — Where the Baltimore Colts will play 1972 preseason games remained in doubt today, but two Maryland congressmen have warned of antitrust legislation unless regular season games are played at home.

And Rep. Edward Garmatz, also D-Md., said he would introduce similar legislation when Congress reconvenes latter this month. Emanuel Cellar, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, has a similar bill in the hopper.

Meanwhile the Colts, who are rumored dickering for a transfer to Tampa, Fla., offered the prospect Tuesday on higher 1972 ticket prices unless a suitable preseason schedule can be arranged.

In an interview, General Manager Don Klosterman also said the Colts had not sought permission from the National Football League to move their franchise.

"We agree with Commissioner Pete Rozelle," Klosterman said," that a team should not move as long as it is supported and can operate in a reasonable economic manner.

"But we also feel that no other owner or the commissioner can legislate the team into bankruptcy."

The Colts scheduled preseason games at home last fall-for the first time in 10 years- but averaged only 15,000 for conteste with Kansas City, Chicago and Dallas.

Klosterman praised Colt fans' attendance at regular-season games, but said "preseason games are an important part of our over-all financial structure."

Klosterman said the NFL club probably would decide within two weeks on the site of their proposed three home preseason games, and any necessary adjustment in ticket prices.

But as to talk that Jack Nicklaus might be trying to take over the Colts, the pro golfing great got a chuckle over being rumored as head of a syndicate trying to buy the Colts for $23 million.

"Twenty-three million?" Nicklaus asked Tuesday. "They must think I'm Arnold Palmer.

That's a lot of birdies.

"If somebody offered me a team for $23 million, I'd begin to choke," he said. "I'm still trying to get my first million ....to keep anyway."Speaking from his lakeside home in Lost Tree Village, Fla., Nicklaus admitted he had been-and still is-interested in the possibility of being a pro football club owner.

"We have been thinking more about a possible expansion team," Nicklaus said of his affiliation with furniture king Harry Manguarian. "We're still doing our homework" on possible NFL ownership.

Admittedly a football nut, the double Grand Slam winner said his future pro football possibilities "are a matter of putting together a syndicate."

FUNNY BUSINESS — By Roger Bollen

Rebs Build Lead

Richland's dominating performance in the 15th annual Bloomfield Holiday tournament convinced all but one of the coaches voting in the weekly Daily Standard high school basketball poll that the Rebs are the district's number one team after weekend balloting.

Coach Larry Joplin's Rebel's made easy work of three of its four opponents in the 16-team event, struggling only with Dexter 53-50 and wiping out Oran 88-50 in the title match, picked up 14 first place votes to pull out a 43 point lead over second place Senath- Hornersville, who collected the lone first place nod. The pair are the only undefeats clubs in the district.

The overall top 10 took on a new look since the Dec. 22 ratings. Farmington moved among the top ten for the first time this season along with Oran while Fredericktown fell from the elite.

Charleston made the biggest drop in this week's poll after losing in the finals of the Cape Girardeau Holiday event to Central high, who on the other hand made the biggest advance. The Bluejays fell from second to fourth while Central jumped from eighth in the last poll to third this week.

Lilbourn remained fifth while Kelly shared its sixth place with Farmington. Advance tumbled from fourth to seventh while Dexter jumped from ninth to eighth. Oran took over ninth and Caruthersville remained tenth.

Illinois Upsets Indiana

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While not everybody in Northern Illinois' gym liked the music before the game against Indiana Tuesday night, there were no complaints about the sweet sounds on the court once the game got started.

The Huskies, who came into the game with a 102.5 scoring average—second highest in the nation—upset fifth-ranked Indiana 85-71 despite a 30-point outburst by the Hoosiers' Jobie Wright.

The national anthem was played before the game, the first time since Northern Illinois President Richard Nelson imposed a ban on its playing Dec. 4. The ban had been placed because of objections by black students at the school.

When the anthem was played Tuesday night, Northern's six black cheerleaders walked off the floor and most of the black students in the crowd refused to stand.

But everybody liked the game that came after the anthem—everybody, that is, except the visitors.

Northern jumped off to a 10-3 lead in the opening 2¹ ½ minutes and was never threatened. The Huskies led 43-33 at the half, raised the spread to 63-42 after eight minutes of the second half and then coasted home.

The victory was Northern Illinois' eighth in nine outings, while Indiana suffered its second loss against eight triumphs. Jim Bradley led the Huskies in scoring with 24 points, 12 in each half, while Billy Harris added 18.

In a pair of West Coast games, eighth-ranked Long Beach State raised its record to 10-1 by taking a 95-82 decision over Temple, now 8-3, while No. 16 Hawai was knocked from the unbeaten ranks by Los Angeles Loyola 88-78.

Long Beach, registering its 47th consecutive home victory, was paced by center Nate Stephens, who scored 19 points, and guard Ed Ratleff, who added 15.

Steve Smith, Loyola's 6-foot-8 center, scored 32 points and grabbed 22 rebounds as Hawaii suffered its first loss in 10 games. Loyola, which led all the way, is now 4-5.

Sophomore forward John Falconi hit his last 10 field goal attempts to pace Davidson to an 88-84 upset over No. 17 St. John's in New York.

Davidson, 7-3, trailed 43-38 at the half, surged ahead 69-55 with 10:50 remaining, then held off a late charge by the Redmen, now 8-3.

"We just didn't want this one," lamented St. John's Coach Frank Mulzoff. "We weren't ready to play."

Falconi was high man in the game with 24 points, while Bill Schaeffer topped St. John's with 20.

No. 20 Florida State squeaked past St. Louis 63-62 to win the Senior Bowl basketball crown in Mobile, Ala. The Billikens, trailing by one point in the final minute, held the ball for one last do-or-die attempt, but Harry Rogers' 20-footer missed at the buzzer.

Florida State climbed to 10-2 with the victory, while the defeat was the first for St. Louis in seven outings.

Princeton, 7-2, got 41 points from its backcourt duo of Brian Taylor and Ted Manakas and defeated Michigan 91-82 at Princeton. Henry Wilmore, making his first start since suffering a knee injury two weeks ago, led all scorers with 29 points for Michigan.

Missouri, 11-1, raced to a 5943 lead over Ohio U., then held on to beat the Bobcats 78-76. Greg Falker and John Brown netted 20 apiece for Missouri, while Jim Corde led Ohio with 23.

In other games, Niagara, 9-1, rolled over Bowling Green 8874; Vic Thomas hit on his first 10 shots and finished with 22 points as St. Bonaventure, 5-2, overpowered Baldwin-Wallace 100-69; Ron Behagen scored 25 points and grabbed 17 rebounds to spark Minnesota past Chicago-Loyola 84-59, and in a pair of overtime contests, Colorado nipped Tulane 75-74 and Southern Methodist edged Oklahoma 96-92.

Two touring national teams came out on the short end. The Australians were beaten by Yale 103-90, while the Poles dropped an 84-75 decision to Tennessee.

Twins' Physician Operates On Tiger Field Chief

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP)—Billy Martin, manager of the Detroit Tigers, was scheduled to undergo surgery this morning on his left knee to repair damaged tendons and muscles.

"The injury has been bothering Billy for a long time," said Dr. Harvey O'Phelan, the Minnesota Twins' team physician who was to perform surgery. "I'm hopeful we can help him."

Martin, a former Twins skipper, managed part of the 1971 American League season with a cast on his leg.

Surgery was to be performed at St. Mary's Hospital.

The Tigers, Martin said earlier, would have liked him to have the surgery in Detroit.

"But this is my home," said Martin. "And I wanted Dr. O'Phelan to do the operation at St. Mary's."

NFL Rookies Honored

Brockington Tops Offense

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — "I did a good job but I still can improve," said John Brockington, named Tuesday as the NFL Ofensive Rookie of the Year by The Associated Press after setting a first-year rushing record for Green Bay.

"I did a lot of learning this year about pro football in general, finding out what I can do," the husky 23-year-old Ohio State University senior added. "I want to try to get more yardage next year.

"I want to be a better man in the passing game. I want to help the Packers get back on top of the league."

Brockington's 1,105 yards rushing—he was the fourth rookie in pro history to gain 1,000 yards—was one of the few good things to happen to Green Bay this season. They ended with a 4-8-2 record, the worst since 1958 for the Packers.

Brockington, a 6-foot-1, 225pounder was the overwhelming selection for offense rookie honors by a nationwide panel of sports writer and sportscasters. He amassed 43½ votes out of 60 cast. Jim Plunkett, quarterback for the New England Patriots, was runnerup with 14½ votes. The other two votes went to Vic Washington of the San Francisco 49ers and John Riggins of the New York Jets.

Brockington rushed for more than 100 yards in four different games, including a 142-yard effort on 30 carries in a 17-14 win over the Chicago Bears Nov. 7.

In the Dec. 12 game against the Bears at Geen Bay he snapped the 1,000-yard mark.

"I got the least yards against Miami the next week," Brockington said. He couldn't recall what that distance was. Game recods show he rushed for 73 yards agaist the Dolphins.

"Considering it was my first year in pro ball," he said, "I feel I did a good job, but I still can improve. I know that.

Brockington, married and the father of a 4-year-old daughter, said he still needs 20 hours of academic wrk to graduate and plans to spend the next two quarters at Ohio State. He's working on a degree in education and hopes some dayto become a history teacher.

Green Bay acquired Brockington by getting an earlier draft pick in a deal that sent quarterback Don Horn to Denver for lineman Alden Roche.

Coach Dan Devine said that while the Packers knew Brockington was talented, his big year surprised them.

"I'd have to say he was a pleasant suprise, although we knew right away when we first looked at him in our spring camp in Arlington, Tex., that we had something special," Devine said.

Robertson Tops Defense

NEW YORK (AP) — Isiah Robertson wasn't on the National Football League's statistical charts—but the Los Angeles Rams' outside linebacker was all over enemy quarterbacks, receivers and running backs.

That blitzing, fumble-forcing and pass-wrecking game which he played throughout the year earned Robertson the runaway selection today as The Associated Press Defensive Rookie of the Year.

The 6-foot-3, 225-pounder from Southern University in Baton Rouge, La., a first-roun pick on a draft choice obtained from the Washington Redskins, garnered 37 of the 60 votes by a nationwide panel of sports writers and sports broadcasters.

His closest challenger was the American Conference's top vote-getter, linebacker Phil Villapiano of the Oakland Raiders with seven, followed by defensive backs Tom Hayes of Atlanta with five and Clarence Scott of Cleveland with four, defensive back Jack Tatum of Oakland and defensive tackle Julius Adams of New England with three votes apiece and defensive back Jack Ham of Pittsburgh with one.

"Isiah could be all-pro in his rookie year," teammate David "Deacon" Jones said early in the season. "He has great speed and potential. He's the best No. 1 choice I've seen since I've been with the Rams," the 11-year defensive end added.

It took a while for Robertson to get going, linebacker coach Tom Catlin said. "Isiah wasted six weeks this summer. He spent three in the College AllStar camp and, when he got here, he just wasn't putting out—he was sleepwalking."

He didn't even start the Rams' first two games, playing behind veteran John Pergine. "If you're not a starter when the regular season begins," Coach Tomy Prothro said, "usually there are only two ways you can get to play—if there's an injury or your No. 1 man plays badly. You simply don't have much of a chance to prove yourself in practice by that time."

Robertson got his chance when Pergine suffered a hyperextended elbow and he caught fire immediately, intercepting a pass in that game and the next two and showing great speed and lateral pursuit that prompted Catlin to revise his earlier comments.

"I've said many times there isn't anything this kid can't do."

Rebs Build Lead

Richland's dominating performance in the 15th annual Bloomfield Holiday tournament convinced all but one of the coaches voting in the weekly Daily Standard high school basketball poll that the Rebs are the district's number one team after weekend balloting.

Coach Larry Joplin's Rebel's made easy work of three of its four opponents in the 16-team event, struggling only with Dexter 53-50 and wiping out Oran 88-50 in the title match, picked up 14 first place votes to pull out a 43 point lead over second place Senath- Hornersville, who collected the lone first place nod. Illinois Upsets Indiana

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While not everybody in Northern Illinois' gym liked the music before the game against Indiana Tuesday night, there were no complaints about the sweet sounds on the court once the game got started.

The Huskies, who came into the game with a 102.5 scoring average—second highest in the nation—upset fifth-ranked Indiana 85-71 despite a 30-point outburst by the Hoosiers' Jobie Wright.

The national anthem was played before the game, the first time since Northern Illinois President Richard Nelson imposed a ban on its playing Dec. 4. The ban had been placed because of objections by black students at the school.

When the anthem was played Tuesday night, Northern's six black cheerleaders walked off the floor and most of the black students in the crowd refused to stand.

But everybody liked the game that came after the anthem—everybody, that is, except the visitors.

Northern jumped off to a 10-3 lead in the opening 2¹ ½ minutes and was never threatened. The Huskies led 43-33 at the half, raised the spread to 63-42 after eight minutes of the second half and then coasted home.

The victory was Northern Illinois' eighth in nine outings, while Indiana suffered its second loss against eight triumphs. Jim Bradley led the Huskies in scoring with 24 points, 12 in each half, while Billy Harris added 18.

In a pair of West Coast games, eighth-ranked Long Beach State raised its record to 10-1 by taking a 95-82 decision over Temple, now 8-3, while No. 16 Hawai was knocked from the unbeaten ranks by Los Angeles Loyola 88-78.

Long Beach, registering its 47th consecutive home victory, was paced by center Nate Stephens, who scored 19 points, and guard Ed Ratleff, who added 15.

Steve Smith, Loyola's 6-foot-8 center, scored 32 points and grabbed 22 rebounds as Hawaii suffered its first loss in 10 games. Loyola, which led all the way, is now 4-5.

Sophomore forward John Falconi hit his last 10 field goal attempts to pace Davidson to an 88-84 upset over No. 17 St. John's in New York.

Davidson, 7-3, trailed 43-38 at the half, surged ahead 69-55 with 10:50 remaining, then held off a late charge by the Redmen, now 8-3.

"We just didn't want this one," lamented St. John's Coach Frank Mulzoff. "We weren't ready to play."

Falconi was high man in the game with 24 points, while Bill Schaeffer topped St. John's with 20.

No. 20 Florida State squeaked past St. Louis 63-62 to win the Senior Bowl basketball crown in Mobile, Ala. The Billikens, trailing by one point in the final minute, held the ball for one last do-or-die attempt, but Harry Rogers' 20-footer missed at the buzzer.

Florida State climbed to 10-2 with the victory, while the defeat was the first for St. Louis in seven outings.

Princeton, 7-2, got 41 points from its backcourt duo of Brian Taylor and Ted Manakas and defeated Michigan 91-82 at Princeton. Henry Wilmore, making his first start since suffering a knee injury two weeks ago, led all scorers with 29 points for Michigan.

Missouri, 11-1, raced to a 5943 lead over Ohio U., then held on to beat the Bobcats 78-76. Greg Falker and John Brown netted 20 apiece for Missouri, while Jim Corde led Ohio with 23.

In other games, Niagara, 9-1, rolled over Bowling Green 8874; Vic Thomas hit on his first 10 shots and finished with 22 points as St. Bonaventure, 5-2, overpowered Baldwin-Wallace 100-69; Ron Behagen scored 25 points and grabbed 17 rebounds to spark Minnesota past Chicago-Loyola 84-59, and in a pair of overtime contests, Colorado nipped Tulane 75-74 and Southern Methodist edged Oklahoma 96-92.

Twins' Physician Operates On Tiger Field Chief

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP)—Billy Martin, manager of the Detroit Tigers, was scheduled to undergo surgery this morning on his left knee to repair damaged tendons and muscles.

"The injury has been bothering Billy for a long time," said Dr. Harvey O'Phelan, the Minnesota Twins' team physician who was to perform surgery. "I'm hopeful we can help him."

Martin, a former Twins skipper, managed part of the 1971 American League season with a cast on his leg.

Surgery was to be performed at St. Mary's Hospital.

The Tigers, Martin said earlier, would have liked him to have the surgery in Detroit.

"But this is my home," said Martin. "And I wanted Dr. O'Phelan to do the operation at St. Mary's."

NFL Rookies Honored

Brockington Tops Offense

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — "I did a good job but I still can improve," said John Brockington, named Tuesday as the NFL Ofensive Rookie of the Year by The Associated Press after setting a first-year rushing record for Green Bay.

"I did a lot of learning this year about pro football in general, finding out what I can do," the husky 23-year-old Ohio State University senior added. "I want to try to get more yardage next year.

He didn't even start the Rams' first two games, playing behind veteran John Pergine. "If you're not a starter when the regular season begins," Coach Tomy Prothro said, "usually there are only two ways you can get to play—if there's an injury or your No. 1 man plays badly. You simply don't have much of a chance to prove yourself in practice by that time."

Robertson got his chance when Pergine suffered a hyperextended elbow and he caught fire immediately, intercepting a pass in that game and the next two and showing great speed and lateral pursuit that prompted Catlin to revise his earlier comments.

"I've said many times there isn't anything this kid can't do."

Passage Predicted For Nixon's Pending Major Legislative Aims

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has achieved most of his major legislative aims and the two big items in suspense—welfare reform and revenue sharing—will be enacted next year, two of hi top spokesmen say.

The prediction came in the course of a review of Nixon's third year in office by Herbert G. Klein, White House chief of communications, and Clark MacGregor, head lobbyist in Congress for administration proposals.

Klein told newsmen the year was one of "bold changes ... whose effect will be felt for 10 years."

Among domestic achievements, Klein cited enactment of the $15.8 billion tax-cut bill and Social Security benefit increases, programs to fight cancer, sickle cell anemia and drug abuse, environmental legislation, attention to minorities both in legislation and executive appointments, "a major appeal to young people" who received the right to vote at 18, and stimulation of the long-lagging housing industry.

Welfare reform, which Nixon once listed at the top of his domestic priorities, has been stalled in the Senate Finance Committee since the House passed it early this year

But MacGregor said the committee chairman, Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., has given assurances that the bill will be moved out before March 1 for Senate action.

The provision for a federal guarantee of income for needy families may not be in the bill when the committee reports it, MacGregor acknowledged, but he indicated the administration is optimistic about the chances of restoring it on the Senate floor or in the House-Senate conference.

MacGregor said he is not discouraged by the fact that Congress, in the closing days of its session, enacted one feature of the bill that appealed to conservatives and might have swung some votes for the whole measure had it not been passed separately. That provision tightens requirements that able-bodied welfare recipients register for job training.

"Conservatives don't dominate the United States Senate," he said. "They do dominate the Finance Committee."

Nixon's proposal to share $5 billion a year of federal income tax receipts with state and local governments has not been acted on by the House Ways and Means Committee, where such legislation must originate.

Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, DArk., has introduced a substitute involving about the same amount of money, but basing distribution more on need and on the states' use of their own income taxes. The Mills bill also would keep congressional strings on spending the money.

MacGregor said he has been informed that Mills assured Nixon the committee will act promptly next year on some version of the legislation.

Although he would not say the Mills plan was acceptable, MacGregor said the committee, in considering elements of both plans, might well come up with something superior to either. In any case, he said, he expects it to produce a bill Nixon could sign.

Asked whether he was prediiting that both revenue sharing and welfare reform will be enacted in 1972, he replied that he was.

In response to another question, MacGregor said he has changed his earlier assessment that the Democratic leadership of Congress was acting politically.

However, he described as blatantly political the Democrats' unsuccessful effort to enact a tax checkoff plan for financing presidential campaigns in time for the 1972 election.

MacGregor said that, despite that effort, "We have received less political and more constructive response than I expected .... I think we will get a surprisingly high degree of cooperation from the Democratic Congress next year—at least for the first few months."

MacGregor said a substantial increase in the defense budget for the year beginning July 1 is in the works, but that he could cite no figures for it yet.

Asked whether he shares the opinion expressed by some that the United States has fallen behind the Soviet Union in military strength, Klein said, "I have to agree that some ground has been lost because of the failure of the previous administration to develop new systems requiring long lead time."

SENATOR SYMINGTON CONTINUES 16-NATION TOUR

WASHINGTON, D.C. -- Senator Symington has crossed the half - way point in his tour of 16 foreign countries as a member of the Senate Foreign Relations and Armed Services Committees and sends his best wishes to all Missourians for a more peaceful and more prosperous New Year.

Senator Symington is chairman of the Subcommittee on Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs and the Subcommittee on U.S. Security Agreements and Commitments Abroad. The nations on his itinerary are within the jurisdiction of these committees.

Although Senator Symington was briefly shaken up in an automobile accident Christmas Day in Seoul, Korea, after an overnight check - up in the 121st Evacuation hospital at Seoul, he continued with Mrs. Symington on to Okinawa without interrupting his tour schedule. The car in which Symington was riding on the way back from an early Christmas morning visit with servicemen at Osan Air Base, was hit by one of the fire trucks rushing to the Christmas hotel fire in Seoul.

From Okinawa, Senator and Mrs. Symington flew to Bangkok, Thailand. From there, Senator Symington was able to make short visits to Saigon and then to Phnom Pehn, Cambodia, where he met with the United States Ambassador and Marshal Lon Nol.

After returning again to Bangkok, Senator and Mrs. Symington flew on to New Delhi, India and then planned to be in Tel Aviv, Israel on January 5.

He will continue his tour through several European countries and plans to return to Washington January 18.

CONGRESS APPROVES TEMPORARY CONTINUATIO OF FOREIGN AID

When the Congress reconvenes January 18, consideration soon will begin again on the permanent 1972 fiscal authorization for the U.S. foreign aid programs.

Shortly before adjournment on December 17, the Seante and House approved a compromise to provide temporary funding of foreign aid and related international programs until February 22. Interim funding was approved at an annual rate of $2,760,927,000.

Included in the interim measure was an amendment which Senator Symington introduced in the Senate to place a $341 million ceiling on United States aid, military and economic, to Cambodia.

The amendment introduced by Senator Mike Mansfield (D-Mont) to set a deadline for withdrawal of United States forces from Vietnam, was defeated in the House and not included in the interim legislation.

SENATE TO CONSIDER FEED GRAIN RESERVE BILL

The Senate will have an opportunity to consider early in the new session a House - passed bill creating a national wheat and feed grain reserve designed to boost farm prices and to provide an adequate supply of food for consumers in a time of shortage.

The House included in the bill a major portion of an amendment introduced by Senator Symington in the Senate which would raise price - support loan levels for wheat and feed grains by 25 percent.

Ashbrook Makes GOP Nomination Bid Official

WASHINGTON (AP) — Accusing President Nixon of largely abandoning his 1968 campaign promises, Rep. John M. Ashbrook announced his challenge to Nixon for the presidency Wednesday to give conservatives what he called an opportunity to remind Nixon of those promises.

The Ohio Republican said his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination would begin with the New Hampshire and Florida primaries.

Ashbrook accused Nixon of endangering U.S. national security, deepening the "illusion of detente" with Red China and the Soviet Union in defiance of pledges three years ago and "the largest, most outrageous string of deficits in American peacetime history."

Ashbrook also assailed Nixon's family assistance plan, saying it would more than double the U.S. welfare roles with a guaranteed annual income.

If Americans wanted the kind of program Nixon has produced, Ashbrook contended, they "would have stuck to the party with the real expertise in these areas, the Democratic party."

But he said Nixon was elected because he offered change "and it was to be in the conservative direction."

Ashbrook said it was "because the promise and hope of the 1968 campaign have been so largely abandoned that I am declaring my candidacy for president of the United States."

"It is my firm belief," he said, "that the Nixon program of 1968 genuinely reflected majority sentiment in the Republican party and throughout the nation."

Since his possible candidacy was first mentioned early this month, the 43-year-old, six -term congressman has roused increasing interest in challenging Nixon from the right.

"It would be sort of a Paul Revere ride," he has said in discussing what conservatives could gain from such a challenge. "It's the only thing the President will listen to."

Ashbrook says he has no illusions that he could defeat Nixon in any primary, but he thinks a strong showing of conservative unhappiness with the Nixon administration would lead to policy changes.

He and other conservatives are particularly critical of Nixon's overtures to Red China, his support of a costly family assistance welfare plan and his failure to reduce federal spending.

Widely known among conservatives, in contrast to his nearly total obscurity on the broader national scene, Ashbrook was tapped as a prospective candidate by a group of New York City conservatives who announced five months ago they were "suspending" support of Nixon.

Ashbrook's candidacy could make Nixon the man in the middle in New Hampshire's primary March 7. The President already faces a liberal challenge in the GOP primary from Rep. Paul N. McCloskey of California.

Ashbrook and his supporters are fearful that with no conservative in the New Hampshire primary, McCloskey would harvest protest votes from anti - Nixon conservatives, greatly inflating his true strength.

"2. That the defendant Bill does throw newspapers about the floor when finished reading. That the defendant Betty does leave dinner dishes overnight without reason.

"Therefore, the defendant Bill, violating the above shall mop the floor and/or wash the windows for not less than three (3) days. Also, the defendant Betty, violating the above, shall wash the Volkswagen and clean interior.

"3. That the defendant Bill does not and will not replace shaving materials after using. That the defendant Betty does not keep her bathroom neat from cosmetics, etc.

"Therefore, the defendant Bill, violating the above, consents to the plaintiff Betty to put such materials into hiding place for not more than three (3) days. Also the defendant Betty, violating the above, must consent to the plaintiff Bill to put such articles into hiding place for not more than three (3) days.

"4. That the defendant Bill does not and will not place his dirty dishes into dishwasher and the supper dishes on nights when wife works. That the defendant Betty does not and will not keep her dressing table neat from panty-hose and other various undergarments.

"Therefore, the defendant Bill, violating the above, shall do dishes and keep the kitchen clean for not less than and not more than four (4) days; allowing plaintiff Betty to dirty as many dishes as she sees fit. Also, the defendant Betty, violating the above, shall become a complete servant to the plaintiff Bill, doing for him whatsoever he asks of her that is reasonable for not more than and not less than four (4) days. . . ."

The bowls come in luscious colors, and the countertops and cabinets are styled in virtually any furniture period you may wish. You can go plain or ornate with the faucets too. They come chrome or gold - plated or made of a crystal, jewel - like material. You have your choice of "conventional," single - handle, dial or push-pull.

The bowls are installed in handsome countertops that serve as dressing tables. A cabinet beneath provides drawers and shelves for storage.

The bowls come in luscious colors, and the countertops and cabinets are styled in virtually any furniture period you may wish. You can go plain or ornate with the faucets too. They come chrome or gold - plated or made of a crystal, jewel - like material. You have your choice of "conventional," single - handle, dial or push-pull.

In short, the bedroom vanity lavatory can blend smoothly into the rest of your bedroom furnishings.

MODERN SEARCH

MARYKNOLL, N.Y. (AP) — Contemporary man is showing renewed interest in religion because he is "disillusioned with all the havoc done by science," says Fordham University philosopher, Dr. John B. Chethimattam.

"He is looking for a different understanding of his own life, his own experience, a deeper meaning," the professor said at the Catholic Foreign Mission Society of America here.

Presnell Hospital One Of Bootheel's Oldest

KENNETT – Presnell Hospital — the first and only private hospital in Dunklin County — is winding up its 32nd year, while the wife of its founder, Mrs. U. A. V. Presnell, is beginning her 90th one!

With the new year only hours away, the lovely white - haired woman has been reminiscing about the hospital's past, its present, and its future in the community.

Mrs. Presnell's husband, the late Dr. U. A. V. Presnell, who died in 1946, established the institution in 1939, housed in a two - story brick structure which was the Clyde Pankey homeplace, located on College where the Mrs. Hal McHaney home in now located.

Two years alter, in 1941, the Presnell Hospital building was built where it now stands, on a 17-acre landscaped site which fronts South Jackson. The original hospital on College began with 17 beds, but when the new building was completed on Jackson, a total of 50 beds was included in its inventory.

Dr. Presnell owned the land where the hospital is situated, and after attempting to get enough financial help to construct the hospital, finally put up the land as collateral in order to borrow the needed money.

The hospital's founder and his son and son -in -law, Rr. Rollin Presnell and Dr. Loys Wilson, respectively, staffed the hospital in its infancy, taking just enough out of the operating funds to live on until the hospital was paid off.

During its first years, Presnell continued to be the city's only hospital — public or private — and boasted a large number of physicians, many of whom had offices in the hospital. Included on the staff were Dr. Jameso Fuzzell, Dr. W. E. Morehead, Dr. George Q. Dunmire, Dr. Joe Zimmerman and Dr. Paul Miltenberger, among others.

Mrs. Presnell, known affectionately as Momma Presnell to the hospital staff, was active as the superintendent of the hospital following her husband's death and remained at that post until recent years, when the hospital was incorporated. The corporation consists of Dr. Wilson and his wife, and their three children, Mrs. Norman A. (Lee Ann) Garrison, Mrs. Perry (Lila Jo) Dunn and Charles Presnell Wilson.

Presnell Hospital has always been a family affair, with the staff members considered "family" whether related or not. Mrs. Flora Todd, the hospital's assistant administrator and secretary since it was founded, is Dr. Wilson's sister, Dr. Norman Garrison, one of the hospital's three resident physicians, is his son-in-law.

The hospital's employes apparently feel a close devotion to the hospital and its owners, considering the length of employment. Mrs. Geraldine (Curley) Adkins, has been the hospital's director of nursing since 1966; Sue Austin, Dr. Wilson's office nurse, has served in that position for 13 years; Mrs. Fannie Hazel, an employe in the hospital's own laundry, began her association with the hospital in 1942. One of the nurses with the longest record, was Mrs. Florence Wilkerson, who left a few years ago after a 20-year tenure. In the dietary, housekeeping and nursing departments, most of the employes have been associated with the hospital at least three to five years.

Mrs. Presnell recalls vividly the hospital's beginning, an institution she terms "Dr. Presnell's dream come true." Next door to the hospital, the Presnell homeplace was built after the debts were paid off, "in only three years," she recalls happily. It was right after the war, Mrs. Todd added, "and we burned the papers and had a party." Mrs. Presnell fondly remembers the celebration "when all the kind people who signed notes came."

Dr. Presnell died in 1946, at the age of 66 and for seven more years, Presnell Hospital remained the city and county's only such institution, until 1952, when Dunklin County Memorial Hospital opened its doors. A year later, Dr. Rollin Presnell died. The deaths of the father and son marked the demise of a medical family name. At one time, the Presnells boasted the largest family of doctors in Missouri. The founder was one of five brothers who were all physicians, as was their father.

One of her husband's proudest accomplishments, Mrs. Presnell remembers, was playing an instrumental role in getting Dr. Paul Miltenberger to come to Kennett. Although he has long since moved his office from the hospital, he remains one of six doctors on the hospital's active staff.Others include Dr. Quinton Tarver (whose offices are at the hospital), Dr. John Keith Logan, Dr. W. L. DeLong, and Doctors Wilson and Garrison. On the consulting staff are Dr. Pin H.Fu, pathologist; Dr. E. M. Canlas and Dr. Joe Zimmerman.

Hospital employes also include Alma Anderson, director of the dietary department; Martha Wyatt, in charge of the housekeeping department; Fannie Hazel, head of the laundry department; Norma Luallen, in charge of the medical records; Mrs. Curley Adkins, director of nursing, Joe Donaldson, X-ray department; Rodney Cook, in charge of the laboratory; and C. H.Lorrance, registered pharmacist. The hospital employs a total of 70 persons.

The hospital's obstetrics department was discontinued in 1966. When the last baby was delivered, over 5,500 babies, many into the second generation made their world debut there, according to the family.

Always noted for its self - sufficient operation, Presnell at one time boasted in addition to its own laundry and living accommodations for its nurses — a dairy and garden! "That way we had what we needed here, when we needed it," Mrs. Presnell said, "We also had our own hogs and chickens at one time," she said, "when the doctor was alive."

Since the three - story hospital opened some 30 years ago, its bed count has remained at 50, "although many's the time I've seen 70 patients crowded in here, with the nursery and the hallways lined," Mrs. Presnell said. "It simply was the only hospital around here for years," she added. The first floor houses the doctors' offices, patient rooms and the X-ray suites; the second floor includes more patient rooms, surgery and the intensive care units. In the basement, the pharmacy, labs, dietary department, medical records, insurance and administrative offices are housed,

The 17-acre hospital grounds now includes — in addition to the hospital and the Presnell homeplace — Dr. Wilson's home, to the north and the new Dr. Garrison home, presently under construction.

Because of Mrs. Presnell's arthritis, she abandoned the homeplace recently and moved to the Wilson home, where she delights her grandchildren with tales of times past.

She and her husband's hospital have come a long way — and 1972's just beginning. Happy birthday Mrs. Presnell. Happy anniversary, hospital.

Presnell Hospital One Of Bootheel's Oldest

KENNETT – Presnell Hospital — the first and only private hospital in Dunklin County — is winding up its 32nd year, while the wife of its founder, Mrs. U. A. V. Presnell, is beginning her 90th one!

With the new year only hours away, the lovely white - haired woman has been reminiscing about the hospital's past, its present, and its future in the community.

Mrs. Presnell's husband, the late Dr. U. A. V. Presnell, who died in 1946, established the institution in 1939, housed in a two - story brick structure which was the Clyde Pankey homeplace, located on College where the Mrs. Hal McHaney home in now located.

Two years alter, in 1941, the Presnell Hospital building was built where it now stands, on a 17-acre landscaped site which fronts South Jackson. The original hospital on College began with 17 beds, but when the new building was completed on Jackson, a total of 50 beds was included in its inventory.

Dr. Presnell owned the land where the hospial is situated, and after attempting to get enough financial help to construct the hospital, finally put up the land as collateral in order to borrow the needed money.

The hospital's founder and his son and son -in -law, Rr. Rollin Presnell and Dr. Loys Wilson, respectively, staffed the hospital in its infancy, taking just enough out of the operating funds to live on until the hospital was paid off.

During its first years, Presnell continued to be the city's only hospital — public or private — and boasted a large number of physicians, many of whom had offices in the hospital. Included on the staff were Dr. Jameso Fuzzell, Dr. W. E. Morehead, Dr. George Q. Dunmire, Dr. Joe Zimmerman and Dr. Paul Miltenberger, among others.

Mrs. Presnell, known affectionately as Momma Presnell to the hospital staff, was active as the superintendent of the hospital following her husband's death and remained at that post until recent years, when the hospital was incorporated. The corporation consists of Dr. Wilson and his wife, and their three children, Mrs. Norman A. (Lee Ann) Garrison, Mrs. Perry (Lila Jo) Dunn and Charles Presnell Wilson.

Presnell Hospital has always been a family affair, with the staff members considered "family" whether related or not. Mrs. Flora Todd, the hospital's assistant administrator and secretary since it was founded, is Dr. Wilson's sister. Dr. Norman Garrison, one of the hospital's three resident physicians, is his son-in-law.

The hospital's employes apparently feel a close devotion to the hospital and its owners, considering the length of employment. Mrs. Geraldine (Curley) Adkins, has been the hospital's director of nursing since 1966; Sue Austin, Dr. Wilson's office nurse, has served in that position for 13 years; Mrs. Fannie Hazel, an employe in the hospital's own laundry, began her association with the hospital in 1942. One of the nurses with the longest record, was Mrs. Florence Wilkerson, who left a few years ago after a 20-year tenure. In the dietary, housekeeping and nursing departments, most of the employes have been associated with the hospital at least three to five years.

Mrs. Presnell recalls vividly the hospital's beginning, an institution she terms "Dr. Presnell's dream come true." Next door to the hospital, the Presnell homeplace was built after the debts were paid off, "in only three years," she recalls happily. It was right after the war, Mrs. Todd added, "and we burned the papers and had a party." Mrs. Presnell fondly remembers the celebration "when all the kind people who signed notes came."

Dr. Presnell died in 1946, at the age of 66 and for seven more years, Presnell Hospital remained the city and county's only such institution, until 1952, when Dunklin County Memorial Hospital opened its doors. A year later, Dr. Rollin Presnell died. The deaths of the father and son marked the demise of a medical family name. At one time, the Presnells boasted the largest family of doctors in Missouri. The founder was one of five brothers who were all physicians, as was their father.

One of her husband's proudest accomplishments, Mrs. Presnell remembers, was playing an instrumental role in getting Dr. Paul Miltenberger to come to Kennett. Although he has long since moved his office from the hospital, he remains one of six doctors on the hospital's active staff.Others include Dr. Quinton Tarver (whose offices are at the hospital), Dr. John Keith Legan, Dr. W. L. DeLong, and Doctors Wilson and Garrison. On the consulting staff are Dr. Pin H.Pu, pathologist; Dr. E. M. Canlas and Dr. Joe Zimmerman.

Hospital employes also include Alma Anderson, director of the dietary department; Martha Wyatt, in charge of the housekeeping department; Fannie Hazel, head of the laundry department; Norma Luallen, in charge of the medical records; Mrs. Curley Adkins, director of nursing, Joe Donaldson, X-ray department; Rodney Cook, in charge of the laboratory; and C. H.Lorrance, registered pharmacist. The hospital employs a total of 70 persons.

The hospital's obstetrics department was discontinued in 1966. When the last baby was delivered, over 5,500 babies, many into the second generation made their world debut there, according to the family.

Always noted for its self - sufficient operation, Presnell at one time boasted in addition to its own laundry and living accommodations for its nurses — a dairy and garden! "That way we had what we needed here, when we needed it," Mrs. Presnell said. "We also had our own hogs and chickens at one time," she said, "when the doctor was alive."

Since the three - story hospital opened some 30 years ago, its bed count has remained at 50, "although many's the time I've seen 75 patients crowded in here, with the nursery and the hallways lined," Mrs. Presnell said. "It simply was the only hospital around here for years," she added. The first floor houses the doctors' offices, patient rooms and the X-ray suites; the second floor includes more patient rooms, surgery and the intensive care units. In the basement, the pharmacy, labs, dietary department, medical records, insurance and administrative offices are housed.

The 17-acre hospital grounds now includes — in addition to the hospital and the Presnell homeplace — Dr. Wilson's home, to the north and the new Dr. Garrison home, presently under construction.

Because of Mrs. Presnell's arthritis, she abandoned the homeplace recently and moved to the Wilson home, where she delights her grandchildren with tales of times past.

She and her husband's hospital have come a long way — and 1972's just beginning. Happy birthday Mrs. Presnell. Happy anniversary, hospital.

ENDING THE DEPRESSION DOWN ON THE FARM

As we enter 1972 we can look forward, with confidence, to the continuation of an annual sad truth: The depression in American agriculture will go on another year. Yet it need not be.

The fundamental fact of American agriculture is surplus production. The result is a permanent economic bias toward minimum prices to the farmer.

The dramatic productivity gains which have created this surplus are certain to continue. There are experimental wheat varieties now growing which seem certain to increase yields 25%. We can plan on yield increases in soybeans of up to 40% within the next few years. So more and more downward pressure on prices is inevitable.

Part of the answer to controlling excess production will obviously continue to be effective governmental supply management -- and therefore price management -- programs. I consider the present program (which I voted against in 1970) to have been a drastic failure in 1971 in terms of supply management.

It is the kind of failure that is almost inevitable in a program which relies as heavily as this one does on the discretion of government bureaucrats.

"Cheap Food"

We must recognize that U. S. government policy toward agriculture will always be a "cheap food" policy. America is an urban nation today. Ninety - five percent of the voters don't grow food; they eat it.

Under these circumstances, it is dangerously unrealistic, not only for farmers, but for a nation which depends heavily on free enterprise agriculture for its economic and strategic strength, to choose to rely on government programs to do anything more than an inescapable minimum for farm income.

If we are to minimize -- not eliminate -- our dependence on government for supply and price management, we need to strengthen dramatically the available non - governmental instruments.

Expand Exports

One of these is export expansion. Our extraordinary productivity, which is such a burden at home, is potentially an unbeatable weapon in world markets. Indeed, the world market is the ONLY arena in which our productivity can pay off for American agriculture. And our competitive advantage in food and feed is doubly important when industrial commodities are being so severely hurt by foreign competition. Agriculture is our strong hand, and we ought to play it for all it is worth.

Next comes bargaining. If free enterprise agriculture is to survive in America, the producer's bargaining clout must be increased.

Part of the reason is political; farmers need to replace their shrinking political clout with more economic clout.

The fundamental reason, however, is economic: The commodities market has become increasingly concentrated during the last decade or two, leaving individual farmers with no weight on their side of the bargaining table.

Government sponsored economic parity will never happen. Parity or power in the marketplace is the only answer.

Conglomerate Take-Over

Unless the average farmer's bargaining hand is strengthened, it is inevitable that American food production will gradually be taken over by vertically integrated food conglomerates, which can afford to absorb losses at the initial production level and then make them up in processing and slick advertising before their goods reach the supermarket shelves.

Evidence is accumulating that these mammoth farming operations are not particularly efficient compared with the kind of well - run independent farms most Missourians operate. Nor do they conserve the nation's land and water resources as carefully as an independent farmer does. What they can do, however, is make up for these deficiencies through overwhelming control of the marketplace ... for which everyone of us will pay the bill.

I strongly opposed the nomination of Dr. Earl L. Butz as Secretary of Agriculture because, among the areas on which he and I differ, he is such an avowed exponent of the giant agribusiness corporations.

I am in favor of whatever will strengthen the bargaining position of independent farmers ... provided that it does not further increase their dependence on government.

No Future As Farmers

Last fall, I was in the Kansas City airport when the Future Farmers of America Convention let out. There were several hundred boys and girls in the airport waiting to fly home, all proudly dressed in their blue Future Farmers of America jackets.

Right now we all know that 9/10 of those Future Farmers have no future as farmers. Sure, a few will make it. Some will be successful on their own. More will end up as hired managers, waiting for the company truck to deliver their feed, the company combine to bring in their wheat, and the company truck to take it away.

This is not a pretty picture, either in social terms or in terms of America's long — term economic health It is the picture we are painting for ourselves today.

I am prepared to work closely with Missouri farmers to paint a different one.

THERE MUST BE A PONY
by James Kirkwood
(Avon N398/95c
288 pp.)

"Vigorous, sensitive, compelling. It makes the step to that area of universality which is at the core of all great fiction."

--The Los Angeles Times

THERE MUST BE A PONY is James Kirkwood's touching novel of a 16-year -old boy's coming -of - age in the unreal world of Hollywood.

Josh Cydney is 16, sensitive and oddly optimistic. He and his once famous movie star mother have watched her career die and three marriages flounder. Josh painfully watches his mother fall in love with the wrong kind of men until she meets Ben, who gives them the love they have desperately sought.

Should We Tax Soft Drink?

JEFFERSON CITY -- Citizens Committee for Conservation Chairman Ted Scott today asked Missourians to make what may be the most important New Year.s resolution of their lives -- a resolve to provide in 1972 an expanded conservation program for land, water, wildlife and recreation for all Missourians. "This," Scott said, "is definitely a priority program that must be undertaken now."

The Citizens Committee is currently conducting an initiative petition drive to place a constitutional amendment taxing soft drinks on the ballot of the next general election. The 1cents per unit tax would be earmarked exclusively for new and expanded conservation programs.

"Land -use practices are changing rapidly," Scott said in an open letter directed to the Citizens Committee staff, "and we need to act 'pronto' in order to save a bit of what is left of natural areas. The longer we wait, the less chance we will have to pass along to future generations a livable Missouri. We know what needs to be done, and we now have a good plan to do it, yet there are a few who still do not recognize this great need. Our job is to point it out to them.

"Wildlife is fighting a losing battle," Scott wrote. "Near large cities like St. Louis and Kansas City, more and more land is being converted into housing and industrial sites. The little patches of woods and fields on the edges of the suburbs that so many of us enjoy are rapidly disappearing. And, as the outlying lands are divided up, it becomes extremely difficult for an inner - city resident to come in touch with the good earth at all.

"The situation is not much better in rural areas," he commented. "Missouri is known as the cave state and has hundreds of caves, natural stone arches and sink holes. Yet Missourians have very little access to these wonders, many of which are suffering commercialization or destruction at the hands of vandals. Who in Missouri isn't a sightseer -- who doesn't take an interest in the out - of - doors? No one. We must insure there is something left for all of us to look and marvel at.

"Missouri also boasts of many clean, cold springs. But bulldozers and water pollution are taking an advancing toll on these natural treasures. Talk to an old - timer about the concrete ditch or dry creek that runs through your neighborhood. You may be surprised to find it was once a clear spring or stream. We can guard some of our remaining spring branches and streams, but only by taking immediate, positive steps."

Scott said upland wildlife was suffering from modern farming practices which often leaves little wildlife cover. "Songbirds, rabbits, quail -- all animals -- need the right combination of food and cover to survive," he said, "but with the use of modern farm equipment we now clear more of the brushy fence rows and gullies that once served these animals so well.

"Timberlands also need priority attention," Scott wrote. "Many people do not realize that there is only one tiny stand of virgin shortleaf pine that we know of remaining in the Ozarks or that foresters have been able to set aside only one 10-acre plot of 200-year virgin white oak. It's obvious that in many cases we should have acted years ago. Today, in many areas indiscriminate cutting is reducing timber at an excessive rate. Look at Missouri black walnut. We can't replace it as quickly as it is being harvested. We need more lands set aside for forest management, for the benefit of forest animals, our important forest products industry and for our own enjoyment. An expanded conservation program would include an expanded forest management assistance plan for timber owners," said Scott. "We could reach and educate more people in the art of timber management."

Scott also said a crash conservation program was necessary for two of the nation's largest rivers, both of which run through or border Missouri. "We have drained and exploited waterfowl habitat along the Missouri and Mississippi rivers for years. The bottoms and bluffs along these rivers are unique natural areas, yet most of us are locked out of what remains of them. We need to acquire a band of land along portions of these great rivers and prevent their further destruction. We haven't even begun to tap the recreational potential they hold."

Scott noted it was increasingly hard for Missourians to find natural areas for their use, whether they be birdwatchers, fishermen, hikers, campers, hunters or whatever. Many natural areas are being commercialized or posted against trespass, he said.

"We all work hard," Scott concluded, "so that we can more full enjoy r our leisure. That's going to be harder and harder as more and more of us head for fewer and fewer open spaces. So we had best not kid ourselves. Unless we act now, there may be little left to save tomorrow. The enactment of our proposal must be our number one New Year's resolution."

Against The Tax

Two landowner associations and six local chapters of the Jaycees throughout the state have adopted resolutions against the proposed soft drink tax.

The Niangua Landowners Conservationist Association, Ozark Landowners Association and the Jaycees of Sikeston, Mountain Grove, Sedalia, St. Joseph, Houston and Cole Camp have endorsed the growing opposition to the proposed 10% sales tax on soda pop sold in Missouri.

The two landowner groups labeled the proposed tax as a "$21,000,000 annual tax burden for the next 20 years."

The Conservation Federation proposes to collect an estimated $600 million over a 20 year period for expansion of conservation efforts in Missouri. Of this, $400 million is to be raised through the proposed tax on soft drink consumers.

The landowner associations are opposed to the proposal primarily because of the vast amount of land to be acquired for public use and the resulting tax loss in private land.

The land to be acquired under the Conservation Federation's proposal, according to the landowners, is "too vague to even estimate the amount. But it can well be in the million acre bracket."

"The acquiring of land for public use has ruined many a county," the landowners said, "and as a result the rest of the taxpayers in the affected counties will have to raise the tax base to compensate for such lands taken out of the private base."

According to collectors and assessors consulted by the landowner associations, "There would be tax base loss in Missouri of approximately 3 to 5 million dollars annually."

The objections voiced by the local Jaycee chapters include the vagueness of the tax collection procedure and the highly discriminatory nature of the tax.

In supporting their position, the Jaycees cited the rejection of similar soft drink tax proposals by 28 state legislatures in the last year alone.

Scott Welfare

The Scott County Welfare Office distributed $206,535 to 2,513 cases in the month of December, 1971, Mrs. Cathleen Gipson, director, reported.

Over 165 children received child welfare services, 125 received protective services, 352 received preventive services, 59 received foster home care, and 37 received adoptive and unmarried mothers services or supplementary services.

Old age assistance, with 1374 cases, was the largest category, with $100,799 paid out, a payment of $73.36 per case.

In the Aid to Dependent Children category, there were 687 cases, and 1782 children. A total of $72,632 was paid out for ADC, a $105.72 payment percase, or $40.76 per child.

There were 194 persons who received General Relief. Total payment was $11,201, and there were 174 cases for a payment of $64.38 per case, or $57.73 per person.

Permanent and Total Disability, with 240 cases, cost $75.32 per case, for a total of $18,078.

Payment per case was $100.27 for 37 cases under Aid to the Blind, for a payment in that category of $3,725.

One case under Blind Pension received $100.

Frankly Speaking

By Senator Tom Eagleton

ENDING THE DEPRESSION DOWN ON THE FARM

As we enter 1972 we can look forward, with confidence, to the continuation of an annual sad truth: The depression in American agriculture will go on another year. Yet it need not be.

The fundamental fact of American agriculture is surplus production. The result is a permanent economic bias toward minimum prices to the farmer.

The dramatic productivity gains which have created this surplus are certain to continue. There are experimental wheat varieties now growing which seem certain to increase yields 25%. We can plan on yield increases in soybeans of up to 40% within the next few years. So more and more downward pressure on prices is inevitable.

Part of the answer to controlling excess production will obviously continue to be effective governmental supply management -- and therefore price management -- programs. I consider the present program (which I voted against in 1970) to have been a drastic failure in 1971 in terms of supply management.

It is the kind of failure that is almost inevitable in a program which relies as heavily as this one does on the discretion of government bureaucrats.

"Cheap Food"

We must recognize that U. S. government policy toward agriculture will always be a "cheap food" policy. America is an urban nation today. Ninety - five percent of the voters don't grow food; they eat it.

Under these circumstances, it is dangerously unrealistic, not only for farmers, but for a nation which depends heavily on free enterprise agriculture for its economic and strategic strength, to choose to rely on government programs to do anything more than an inescapable minimum for farm income.

If we are to minimize -- not eliminate -- our dependence on government for supply and price management, we need to strengthen dramatically the available non - governmental instruments.

Expand Exports

One of these is export expansion. Our extraordinary productivity, which is such a burden at home, is potentially an unbeatable weapon in world markets. Indeed, the world market is the ONLY arena in which our productivity can pay off for American agriculture. And our competitive advantage in food and feed is doubly important when industrial commodities are being so severely hurt by foreign competition. Agriculture is our strong hand, and we ought to play it for all it is worth.

Next comes bargaining. If free enterprise agriculture is to survive in America, the producer's bargaining clout must be increased.

Part of the reason is political; farmers need to replace their shrinking political clout with more economic clout.

The fundamental reason, however, is economic: The commodities market has become increasingly concentrated during the last decade or two, leaving individual farmers with no weight on their side of the bargaining table.

Government sponsored economic parity will never happen. Parity or power in the marketplace is the only answer.

Conglomerate Take-Over

Unless the average farmer's bargaining hand is strengthened, it is inevitable that American food production will gradually be taken over by vertically integrated food conglomerates, which can afford to absorb losses at the initial production level and then make them up in processing and slick advertising before their goods reach the supermarket shelves.

Evidence is accumulating that these mammoth farming operations are not particularly efficient compared with the kind of well - run independent farms most Missourians operate. Nor do they conserve the nation's land and water resources as carefully as an independent farmer does. What they can do, however, is make up for these deficiencies through overwhelming control of the marketplace ... for which everyone of us will pay the bill.

I strongly opposed the nomination of Dr. Earl L. Butz as Secretary of Agriculture because, among the areas on which he and I differ, he is such an avowed exponent of the giant agribusiness corporations.

I am in favor of whatever will strengthen the bargaining position of independent farmers ... provided that it does not further increase their dependence on government.

No Future As Farmers

Last fall, I was in the Kansas City airport when the Future Farmers of America Convention let out. There were several hundred boys and girls in the airport waiting to fly home, all proudly dressed in their blue Future Farmers of America jackets.

Right now we all know that 9/10 of those Future Farmers have no future as farmers. Sure, a few will make it. Some will be successful on their own. More will end up as hired managers, waiting for the company truck to deliver their feed, the company combine to bring in their wheat, and the company truck to take it away.

This is not a pretty picture, either in social terms or in terms of America's long — term economic health It is the picture we are painting for ourselves today.

I am prepared to work closely with Missouri farmers to paint a different one.

THERE MUST BE A PONY
by James Kirkwood
(Avon N398/95c
288 pp.)

"Vigorous, sensitive, compelling. It makes the step to that area of universality which is at the core of all great fiction."

--The Los Angeles Times

THERE MUST BE A PONY is James Kirkwood's touching novel of a 16-year -old boy's coming -of - age in the unreal world of Hollywood.

Josh Cydney is 16, sensitive and oddly optimistic. He and his once famous movie star mother have watched her career die and three marriages flounder. Josh painfully watches his mother fall in love with the wrong kind of men until she meets Ben, who gives them the love they have desperately sought.

Should We Tax Soft Drink?

JEFFERSON CITY -- Citizens Committee for Conservation Chairman Ted Scott today asked Missourians to make what may be the most important New Year.s resolution of their lives -- a resolve to provide in 1972 an expanded conservation program for land, water, wildlife and recreation for all Missourians. "This," Scott said, "is definitely a priority program that must be undertaken now."

The Citizens Committee is currently conducting an initiative petition drive to place a constitutional amendment taxing soft drinks on the ballot of the next general election. The 1cents per unit tax would be earmarked exclusively for new and expanded conservation programs.

"Land -use practices are changing rapidly," Scott said in an open letter directed to the Citizens Committee staff, "and we need to act 'pronto' in order to save a bit of what is left of natural areas. The longer we wait, the less chance we will have to pass along to future generations a livable Missouri. We know what needs to be done, and we now have a good plan to do it, yet there are a few who still do not recognize this great need. Our job is to point it out to them.

"Wildlife is fighting a losing battle," Scott wrote. "Near large cities like St. Louis and Kansas City, more and more land is being converted into housing and industrial sites. The little patches of woods and fields on the edges of the suburbs that so many of us enjoy are rapidly disappearing. And, as the outlying lands are divided up, it becomes extremely difficult for an inner - city resident to come in touch with the good earth at all.

"The situation is not much better in rural areas," he commented. "Missouri is known as the cave state and has hundreds of caves, natural stone arches and sink holes. Yet Missourians have very little access to these wonders, many of which are suffering commercialization or destruction at the hands of vandals. Who in Missouri isn't a sightseer -- who doesn't take an interest in the out - of - doors? No one. We must insure there is something left for all of us to look and marvel at.

"Missouri also boasts of many clean, cold springs. But bulldozers and water pollution are taking an advancing toll on these natural treasures. Talk to an old - timer about the concrete ditch or dry creek that runs through your neighborhood. You may be surprised to find it was once a clear spring or stream. We can guard some of our remaining spring branches and streams, but only by taking immediate, positive steps."

Scott said upland wildlife was suffering from modern farming practices which often leaves little wildlife cover. "Songbirds, rabbits, quail -- all animals -- need the right combination of food and cover to survive," he said, "but with the use of modern farm equipment we now clear more of the brushy fence rows and gullies that once served these animals so well.

"Timberlands also need priority attention," Scott wrote. "Many people do not realize that there is only one tiny stand of virgin shortleaf pine that we know of remaining in the Ozarks or that foresters have been able to set aside only one 10-acre plot of 200-year virgin white oak. It's obvious that in many cases we should have acted years ago. Today, in many areas indiscriminate cutting is reducing timber at an excessive rate. Look at Missouri black walnut. We can't replace it as quickly as it is being harvested. We need more lands set aside for forest management, for the benefit of forest animals, our important forest products industry and for our own enjoyment. An expanded conservation program would include an expanded forest management assistance plan for timber owners," said Scott. "We could reach and educate more people in the art of timber management."

Scott also said a crash conservation program was necessary for two of the nation's largest rivers, both of which run through or border Missouri. "We have drained and exploited waterfowl habitat along the Missouri and Mississippi rivers for years. The bottoms and bluffs along these rivers are unique natural areas, yet most of us are locked out of what remains of them. We need to acquire a band of land along portions of these great rivers and prevent their further destruction. We haven't even begun to tap the recreational potential they hold."

Scott noted it was increasingly hard for Missourians to find natural areas for their use, whether they be birdwatchers, fishermen, hikers, campers, hunters or whatever. Many natural areas are being commercialized or posted against trespass, he said.

"We all work hard," Scott concluded, "so that we can more full enjoy / our leisure. That's going to be harder and harder as more and more of us head for fewer and fewer open spaces. So we had best not kid ourselves. Unless we act now, there may be little left to save tomorrow. The enactment of our proposal must be our number one New Year's resolution."

Against The Tax

Two landowner associations and six local chapters of the Jaycees throughout the state have adopted resolutions against the proposed soft drink tax.

The Niangua Landowners Conservationist Association, Ozark Landowners Association and the Jaycees of Sikeston, Mountain Grove, Sedalia, St. Joseph, Houston and Cole Camp have endorsed the growing opposition to the proposed 10% sales tax on soda pop sold in Missouri.

The two landowner groups labeled the proposed tax as a "$21,000,000 annual tax burden for the next 20 years."

The Conservation Federation proposes to collect an estimated $600 million over a 20 year period for expansion of conservation efforts in Missouri. Of this, $400 million is to be raised through the proposed tax on soft drink consumers.

The landowner associations are opposed to the proposal primarily because of the vast amount of land to be acquired for public use and the resulting tax loss in private land.

The land to be acquired under the Conservation Federation's proposal, according to the landowners, is "too vague to even estimate the amount. But it can well be in the million acre bracket."

"The acquiring of land for public use has ruined many a county," the landowners said, "and as a result the rest of the taxpayers in the affected counties will have to raise the tax base to compensate for such lands taken out of the private base."

According to collectors and assessors consulted by the landowner associations, "There would be tax base loss in Missouri of approximately 3 to 5 million dollars annually."

The objections voiced by the local Jaycee chapters include the vagueness of the tax collection procedure and the highly discriminatory nature of the tax.

In supporting their position, the Jaycees cited the rejection of similar soft drink tax proposals by 28 state legislatures in the last year alone.

Scott Welfare

The Scott County Welfare Office distributed $206,535 to 2,513 cases in the month of December, 1971, Mrs. Cathleen Gipson, director, reported.

Over 165 children received child welfare services, 125 received protective services, 352 received preventive services, 59 received foster home care, and 37 received adoptive and unmarried mothers services or supplementary services.

Old age assistance, with 1374 cases, was the largest category, with $100,799 paid out, a payment of $73.36 per case.

In the Aid to Dependent Children category, there were 687 cases, and 1782 children. A total of $72,632 was paid out for ADC, a $105.72 payment percase, or $40.76 per child.

There were 194 persons who received General Relief. Total payment was $11,201, and there were 174 cases for a payment of $64.38 per case, or $57.73 per person.

Permanent and Total Disability, with 240 cases, cost $75.32 per case, for a total of $18,078.

Payment per case was $100.27 for 37 cases under Aid to the Blind, for a payment in that category of $3,725.

One case under Blind Pension received $100.

Consumer's Question-Box

By MARGARET DANA

Q. I am concerned about the possible bad effects of enzymes in detergents on human skin, or even eyes or nose and throat. I have heard people say enzymes are dangerous for us to be using like that. Can you tell us what facts there are about it?

A. The rumors that enzymes in detergents could be troublemakers probably started when it was found a couple of years or so ago that workers in detergent factories, exposed to high concentration of enzyme DUST, developed skin rashes or respiratory difficulties. So at the request of the Federal Trade Commission and the Food and Drug Administration, the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences appointed a committee of experts to study the matter.

After a nine - month study of all available scientific evidence, this committee reported that innormal home use, enzyme - containing laundry products are not hazardous to those who use them or who wear clothing laundered with them.

Q. I do not understand the difference between "cottage cheese" and "creamed cottage cheese." We do not want any food which has added cream or other fat. Can we tell what has been added to "creamed" cottage cheese, by the label or by any regulation?

A. New terms and names for these uncured cheeses are being proposed at this very time by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. But I doubt if the new names will be any help. They will probably confuse more people.

There have been up to this year two types of this cheese -- plain cottage cheese with dry curd, and creamed cottage cheese which had added creaming ingredients, usually milk fat. The new standards being proposed are: Discontinuance of "creamed cottage cheese" as a name, with the actual product (creamed cottage cheese) called simply "cottage cheese." Then regular cottage cheese would have a new name -- "dry-curd cottage cheese." This would have less than 1/2 of one per cent milk fat.

You can comment on these proposals by writing to: Hearing Clerk; HEW Dept., Room 6-88; 5600 Fishers Lane; Rockville, Mr. 20852. But January 23 is the deadline.

Q. In a recent answer to a question about roasting turkey, you said the USDA food specialists advised NOT using the sometimes recommended "all-night roasting" at low temperature. Will you tell us WHY the USDA advises against this?

A. The USDA explains that it is possible for food poisoning bacteria to grow and produce toxins if the food is in the danger zone --60 to 140 degrees -- for more than three or four hours. Since the oven temperature in the all - night method of roasting is much lower than the recommended 325 degrees for best quality and safety, the turkey could conceivably be in the danger zone much longer than four hours.

Q. Recently I purchased a jar of chili sauce which was labeled "net wt. 12 oz." However, in using this in a recipe I emptied the entire contents into an EIGHT OUNCE MEASURING CUP. If this is a case of false labeling, what can be done to correct it?

A. Your chili sauce WEIGHED 12 ounces, but its LIQUID MEASURE in the cup was eight ounces. These are two entirely different things and not related. Almost always there is a difference between what a liquid product WEIGHS and what it will measure in VOLUME by the cup. No false labeling is involved.

Q. How much, if any, nylon is in polyester fabric? What fabrics would have no nylon at all in them? I am allergic to nylon and would appreciate any information you can give me.

A. I am glad to say this an easy question to answer, and help is already provided wherever you buy. First, nylon is a completely individual fiber, technically called a GENERIC fiber -- a distinct family. Polyester is also. So if nylon is in a fabric, and polyester is in that fabric too, they are there as separate fibers and will be so listed on the fibers and will be so listed on the fiber identification label which the law says must be on all textile products.

Before you buy any textile for clothing or any use affecting your allergy, check the label. It will tell you exactly how much of any fiber is in that cloth. If no such identifying label is there, don't buy the product.

Q. Today at the grocery there were jars labeled "imitation peanut butter." In smaller print the ingredients were listed: "peanuts, vegetable oil, dextrose, hydrogenated vegetable oil and salt." Can you find out how it compares in protein content, digestibility, etc., with a straight all- peanut product?

A. There is no laboratory evaluation of the protein content, etx., of the product you describe available. I would assume, however, it is competing on the basis of PRICE and an acceptable FLAVOR, as opposed to true peanut butter, which by FDA standard must be primarily made of peanuts and nothing else.

Obviously, in "imitation" peanut butter you will get more fat than in regular peanut butter. It is difficult to see what real advantages it could have over the natural proteins and vitamins and flavor of standard peanut butter.

(Margaret Dana welcomes opinions and questions on buying and will use them in her column as rapidly as research and space permit. Personal answers are impossible due to large volume of mail from readerse. Address Margaret Dana Research Center, F. D. 3, Doylestown, Pa. 18901.)

REDISCOVERING COMMUNITY

NEW YORK CITY ... Among underground newspapers published here is a sheet entitled "Everything For Everybody." This apparently also is the name of a minor political and social movement. The crudely printed paper has leftwing editorials but, in the main, consists of classified advertisements of a non=political character. Most of the ads are for baby - sitters, house painters and repair men, people who want help or who seek friends. The ads aren't the sick type one finds in most underground papers in New York City.

In reading a copy of "Everything For Everybody," I was struck hy the fact that the paper is an attempt to develop a communal feeling in the huge, faceless metropolis. Nothing of this sort existed a generation ago. No doubt a paper such as this is helpful to a number of people who feel lost in this non - community. But, then, I realized that this effort to establish community feeling and helpfulness was unnecessary a generation ago.

Big Town, as they used to say on radio in the faraway 1930's and 1940's, retained considerable community feeling on a neighborhood basis. The New Yorker of a generation ago knew many of the people on his block -- the policeman on his beat, the tailor and presser, groceryman, and so forth. But that neighborhood feeling and sense of community has been terribly eroded, if it has not vanished altogether in Manhattan.

This is the era of a massive freak population in New York, of rampant crime and violence, of the shuttered and locked store where the owner admits only known customers. New York today is unsafe and only the freaks and the criminals enjoy full use of the city streets at all hours.

Ever since the early 1950's, the middle class and skilled working people have been fleeing Manhattan for the Long Island suburbs. They seek to escape the crime and instability of life in the inner city.

Actually, this is a national phenomenon. The old cities of the country are in grave trouble as central areas are abandoned by blue and white collar people understandably fearful of crime and deteriorating property values. Conditions in Mahnattan simply represent an extreme.

Meanwhile, the inner cities fill up with unskilled, increasingly lawless people without the social discipline and self - reliance necessary for city living. Absurdly high minimum wage requirements deny employment opportunities to this population. Welfarism is a way of life for these people -- an ugly, destructive existence. The conditions of parisitism breed violence, extremism and alienation from the mainstream of American life.

But the condition of the slum populations in the inner cities is not the only disturbing social development in our country. Many of the middle class people leaving their old neighborhoods fail to find true communities elsewhere. The mobility of our people is hurtful to maintenance of old values or development of sound, new values. Many people feel emotionally dislocated as a result of a continual round of moves from neighborhood to neighborhood and city to city. In the past, the neighborhood school served a constructive purpose in developing community feeling among the young. But government officials oppose the neighborhood school concept. They also are opposed to neighborhoods that aren't racially balanced. All the pressures of society are mounted in such a way to produce alienation.

Many people wonder why there hasn't been more patriotism in recent years. No doubt there are a variety of reasons for dissent regarding the Vietnam War. But lack of identification with place unquestionably is a factor in the dimming of patriotism for many young people. If one doesn't truly have roots in a community, if one lacks a sense of place, how is patriotism to develop?

I recall visiting Israel several years ago and being told that the young people in the country's youth movement camped around the country. They walked over the hills and valleys, discovering Israel and getting its sand and rocks in their shoes and sandals. A studied effort was launched to make young people know their land and to love it.

Perhaps we need something of the sort. But we also need a stabilization of our society and a restoration of the feeling of community.

NOVEMBER

BLOOMFIELD – Two break-ins here Wednesday night not only netted thieves cash, but brought tears to their eyes when a tear gas bomb on one of the safes exploded.

10– BENTON – Circuit Judge Marshall Craig this morning ordered the Sikeston city council to sell the city administrative building to the Carpenter's Union local 618 or to appear in court Dec. 10 to explain their actions in selling the building to the Chamber of Commerce.

Herschel Kenneth Womack, 6, son of Ila Mae Dodd, Route 4, was killed late Thursday afternoon when a rifle accidentally discharged, striking the youth in the head.

20– City officials have had no comment on Friday's circuit court decision ordering the city to sell the administrative offices to the Carpenter's Union local 618 or to appear in court Dec. 10 to show reason why they should not make the sale.

A mid - afternoon fire Friday destroyed a home occupied by Mr. and Mrs. William Lingle and their three small children.

22– MARSTON -- One man was killed and another hospitalized after falling 70 to 80 feet Saturday while working at the City of New Madrid plant construction site in St. Jude Industrial Park.

HOWARDVILLE -- Police said 22-year -old Oscar Shannon of Howardville and 25 - year - old Katherine Woods, also of Howardville, were stabbed Saturday night when they attempted to break up a fight between two other local residents.

23 – City Manager Raymert Miller today announced the promotion of Sgt. Leonard Campbell to detective lieutenant effective Nov. 29.

Three Vandiver men appeared in Magistrate court this morning on charges that they raped a 19-year -old college coed Nov. 7. They are Larry Winfield and Kenny Jones, both 18, and Robert Bonds, 17. The court appointed attorneys for all three.

24– LILBOURN – A Lilbourn school bus carrying 60 students collided with a Cottonbelt freight train at an intersection here Tuesday afternoon, injuring 36 of the students and the bus driver.

A petition drive is expected to be initiated soon in an attempt to bring to a possible vote the repeal of the city manager form of government. The drive is spearheaded by former police sergeant Bobby Norman who was dismissed two weeks ago.

26– In a letter to the Federal Securities Exchange Commission Tuesday, the city requested a hearing with commission officials over Arkansas - Missouri Power Company's refusal to sell the city its natural gas distribution system.

Sixty - nine homes in the new low - income housing subdivision off compress road have been completed and will be turned over to the housing authority today.

27– The four Bootheel counties of Mississippi, New Madrid, Scott and Stoddard can now boast a 1971 grain and cotton harvest of more than $100 million, the best in almost ten years, according to the four agricultural advisors.

Billy Hanna, public housing director, said Friday that some residents may begin moving into the recently completed 69 unit housing project off the Compress road.

29– Subpoenas were given this morning to City Manager Raymert Miller and City Clerk John Vaughn ordering them to present all information pertaining to the proposed sale of the city administrative building.

Former city police sergeant James Cowger was appointed detective sergeant on the force today by City Manager Raymert Miller.

30– A petition drive got underway Monday calling for an end to the city manager form of government here. Bobby Norman, who is heading the drive, said between 400 and 600 signatures are needed to bring the matter to the polls.

JEFFERSON CITY – Scott County Prosecutor Tom Gilmore was today appointed by Gov. Warren Hearnes to the 21-member Missouri Law Enforcement Assistance Council.

Welfare For Unemployed Fathers To End Friday

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — New Year's eve will mark the end of a welfare program aiding unemployed fathers in Missouri.

This means 702 unemployed fathers in families receiving aid to dependent children last mon h will either have to move out or the family can lose its eligibility for ADC.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes is expected to ask the 1972 General Assembly to enact legislation to resume the program. According to a source close to him, he will ask for the extension in his legislative message Jan. 5.

Missouri began the program in July 1968. It allowed fathers to live at home, receive welfare benefits and still keep the ADC payments for the rest of the family. Without the ADC-U program, a family with the father living at home is not eligible for ADC.

Hearnes' first request for the trial program was refused by legislators. Later, the program was accepted reluctantly.

Legislators expressed fear the payments would encourage fathers to stay at home and not look for work. That fear was repeated by lawmakers in the 1971 session.

A bill last session, which would have extended the program beyond Dec. 31, 1971, was introduced in the Senate with the backing of Sen. Raymond Howard, D-St. Louis, and Sen. William Cason, D-Clinton.

Book Review

JAMAICA INN
by Daphne du Maurier
(Avon W307/$1.25
304 pp.)

Daphne du Maurier, author of REBECCA, THE HOUSE ON THE STRAND and many more classic bestsellers, all published by Avon, has, in JAMAICA INN

"... an exciting brew, reminiscent of Stevenson and some of Masefield, and just the thing for a late evening's reading."

--Saturday Review

When first published, The New York Times called JAMAICA INN a remarkable novel which "may be said to mark her veritable coming of age as a novelist. It comes pretty close to being flawless."

A Gothic classic, JAMAICA INN is the name of an old hostelry on the harsh Cornish moors. When young Mary Yellen caught her first glimpse of Jamaica Inn's dark and foreboding facade, little did she know that in the murky horror which made the Inn a byword for terror among its neighbors, she would be swept up in the nightly chill of dark shadows and muffled voices -- and a strange attraction to her uncle's brother, a suspicious and beguiling rogue.

BOOKLET TELLS HOW TO CORRECT NOISE IN PLUMBING

Noisy plumbing is more than just a nuisance. It costs you money, the Plumbing - Heating - Cooling Information Bureau points out. That's because noise is caused by some defect or unusually hard wear on parts of the system.

There are generally three types of noise -- water hammer, whistling and chattering. Water hammer is the thump you hear when faucets are turned off abruptly.

A booklet that gives you detailed information on plumbing noise problems as well as dozens of other tips on how to take care of your plumbing is available for 25 cents plus an 8 cent stamp from the Plumbing - Heating - Cooling Information Bureau, 35 E. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. 60601.

29– Subpoenas were given this morning to City Manager Raymert Miller and City Clerk John Vaughn ordering them to present all information pertaining to the proposed sale of the city administrative building.

Former city police sergeant James Cowger was appointed detective sergeant on the force today by City Manager Raymert Miller.

30– A petition drive got underway Monday calling for an end to the city manager form of government here. Bobby Norman, who is heading the drive, said between 400 and 600 signatures are needed to bring the matter to the polls.

JEFFERSON CITY -- Scott County Prosecutor Tom Gilmore was today appointed by Gov. Warren Hearnes to the 21-member Missouri Law Enforcement Assistance Council.

Welfare For Unemployed Fathers To End Friday

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., (AP) — New Year's eve will mark the end of a welfare program aiding unemployed fathers in Missouri.

This means 702 unemployed fathers in families receiving aid to dependent children last month will either have to move out or the family can lose its eligibility for ADC.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes is expected to ask the 1972 General Assembly to enact legislation to resume the program. According to a source close to him, he will ask for the extension in his legislative message Jan. 5.

Missouri began the program in July 1968. It allowed fathers to live at home, receive welfare benefits and still keep the ADC payments for the rest of the family. Without the ADC-U program, a family with the father living at home is not eligible for ADC.

Hearnes' first request for the trial program was refused by legislators. Later, the program was accepted reluctantly.

Legislators expressed fear the payments would encourage fathers to stay at home and not look for work. That fear was repeated by lawmakers in the 1971 session.

A bill last session, which would have extended the program beyond Dec. 31, 1971, was introduced in the Senate with the backing of Sen. Raymond Howard, D-St. Louis, and Sen. William Cason, D-Clinton.

Book Review

JAMAICA INN
by Daphne du Maurier
(Avon W307/$1.25
304 pp.)

Daphne du Maurier, author of REBECCA, THE HOUSE ON THE STRAND and many more classic bestsellers, all published by Avon, has, in JAMAICA INN

"... an exciting brew, reminiscent of Stevenson and some of Masefield, and just the thing for a late evening's reading."

--Saturday Review

When first published, The New York Times called JAMAICA INN a remarkable novel which "may be said to mark her veritable coming of age as a novelist. It comes pretty close to being flawless."

A Gothic classic, JAMAICA INN is the name of an old hostelry on the harsh Cornish moors. When young Mary Yellen caught her first glimpse of Jamaica Inn's dark and foreboding facade, little did she know that in the murky horror which made the Inn a byword for terror among its neighbors, she would be swept up in the nightly chill of dark shadows and muffled voices -- and a strange attraction to her uncle's brother, a suspicious and beguiling rogue.

BOOKLET TELLS HOW TO CORRECT NOISE IN PLUMBING

Noisy plumbing is more than just a nuisance. It costs you money, the Plumbing - Heating - Cooling Information Bureau points out. That's because noise is caused by some defect or unusually hard wear on parts of the system.

There are generally three types of noise – water hammer, whistling and chattering. Water hammer is the thump you hear when faucets are turned off abruptly.

A booklet that gives you detailed information on plumbing noise problems as well as dozens of other tips on how to take care of your plumbing is available for 25 cents plus an 8 cent stamp from the Plumbing - Heating - Cooling Information Bureau, 35 E. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. 60601.
